British Warships Pound Nazi Bases On Mediterranean

arry Allen Describes Attacks on Axis Supply Lines

hips Laden with Gasoline, Ammunition and Food Shelled

By LARRY ALLEN

WITH THE BRITISH FLEET IN HE EASTERN MEDITERRANAN, July 27 (Wide World)—Brish warships are giving the Axis aborne supply lines a steady ounding which is putting a serious imp into Field Marshal Erwin ommel's Egyptian campaign.

Along with frequent shellings of e advanced Axis supply base at truh, this work at present is e most important part of the avy's contribution to the desert ar.

Supply ships laden with gasoline, mmunition, and foodstuffs have en sunk within the last two eeks, ships whose safe arrival ould have meant another "shot the arm" for the weary enemy rces. With them probably went dozen smaller craft — lighters, hooners and such — which were asted to bits by navy bombers d the guns of the fleet.

Nazi Efforts Fail

The enemy's feverish efforts to ove batteries of heavy guns into line of steel around Mersa Matuh so far have proved singularly effective in halting the rain of gh explosives from the British rships.

Location of the bases from which e British vessels suddenly have ept into broadside position a few les off Matruh six times within o weeks has been a carefully arded secret. This strategy has rked well.

Usually the first sign to the emy of the presence of the warips has been the landing of the ening salvoes square upon the arbor works, jetties and shore inallations.

Crews Happy Again

This series of actions has made ost of the officers and sailors ppy. During the last few months ey had found little to shoot at cept for the swarms of divembers which hounded Maltaund convoys, and there was nothg worth shelling along the Egyptan coastal road as there had been the earlier desert campaigns. r this time the Axis was smart

Higgins Loses Fight To Build Liberty Ships

ays "Buzzards and Vultures" Are Dismantling His Plant

WASHINGTON, July 27 (AP)—A ddy-faced Irishman from the ep south, hopeful of "revolutioning" the ship-building industry, st today a new round in his fight block cancellation of his Mariime Commission contract for conruction of 200 Library ships.

The setback to the hopes of Andrew Jackson Higgins, New Orleans, a. boatbuilder and engineer, occurred as the House member marine committee tabled a resolution to nstruct" the Maritime Commission to stay its cancellation order nding a committee investigation.

Plant Being Dismantled

Meanwhile, Higgins, lugging a tch of photographs showing big ock piles of ship construction aterial at his uncompleted yard, ppeared before a House merchant arine subcommittee and said the buzzards and vultures" already re at work dismantling the plant. He told of his plans to produce ssels with unprecedented speed, ing rolling assembly line prinples developed in the automove industry and saving "at least" 00,000 a ship through reduced bor costs alone.

The action of the full committee llowed an executive session at hich Rear Admiral Emory S. Land, r. shipping administrator and airman of the Maritime Commison, again testified. On Saturday, said shortage of steel was the ason for the cancellation.

As a result of the House committee's decision, Higgins' hopes of aving the order rescinded appear- to rest with the Truman investigating committee of the Senate, hich is scheduled to step into the troversy tomorrow.

SINKING OF SMALL ONION BOAT BRINGS ALLIED TOTAL TO 400

Hungry Nazis Hijack Little Craft and Take Off Cargo; All Three Survivors Safe

(By The Associated Press)

The sinking of an obscure little onion boat by hungry Nazis, announced yesterday by the navy, boosted to 400 the unofficial Associated Press tabulation of allied and neutral ships torpedoed to the bottom of the western Atlantic since Pearl Harbor.

The ironic sinking of the fifty-five-foot craft was reported by Capt. Walter Broward Crosland, who said a low-rationed U-boat hijacked his boat just off Havana, forced himself and two other crewmen out and then helped themselves to 40,000 pounds of onions, canned goods and a quantity of Diesel oil. The three survivors heard an explosion later and presumed the craft was sunk.

Submarines Average Two a Day

Thus in 233 days Axis underwater raiders have averaged nearly two victims daily on the basis of reported sinkings on the Western Atlantic front. With the loss of the 400 ships went the lives of more than 2,000 seamen.

Still missing are at least 1,620 more crewmen or passengers, most of whom may now be considered lost. Figures show 11,766 persons rescued from the 400 allied and neutral merchant craft torpedoed to the bottom.

Gravity of Situation Stressed

The war shipping administration recently emphasized the gravity of the Atlantic peril by announcing that sinkings in the week of July 12-18 were the highest since the war began and that allied losses "have greatly exceeded new construction" despite its tremendous volume.

On the other side of the ledger the government has extended its convoy system, opened anti-submarine schools, added escort vessels and increased air patrols in an all-out effort to smash the underwater

HAMBURG, GREAT GERMAN BASE, ATTACKED BY 600 RAF PLANES

More Than 175,000 Incendiary Bombs Set Many Fires in One of Greatest Air Raids of the War

By DREW MIDDLETON

LONDON, July 27 (AP)—At least six hundred RAF bombers which swarmed upon Hamburg in a powerful overnight assault left Germany's prize port and greatest submarine building center ablaze today from a shower of two-ton explosives and more than 175,000 incendiary bombs in another flaming answer to the U-boat challenge.

Air Marshall Sir Arthur Harris described the assault as "one of the outstandingly successful attacks of the whole war."

Returning airmen said that although the size of the attacking force was short of the 1,000-plane standard set in June, perfect visibility and the weight of the 4,000-pound explosives dropped made the results "better than the 1,000-bomber job on Bremen."

Looked Like Coney Island

One American member of a Canadian unit which took part in the attack said the great German town of 1,700,00 population was so ablaze with fires, searchlight beams and bombs-bursts that it "looked like Coney Island on a Saturday night."

The air ministry news service said that the twenty-nine bombers lost in the raid were "well under five percent of the total number of bombers employed," indicating that at least 600 planes were used.

It described the loses as relatively light, especially considering that "at the present stage of the war Hamburg is probably the most important target in all Germany" and is "without doubt the best defended town in Germany."

Germany's Usual Report

(The Germans said they shot down thirty-seven attacking aircraft. They reported "fairly heavy civilian casualties" and said "a number of buildings, almost all in residential quarters, were destroyed or damaged.")

Faced with the prospect of United States squadrons soon adding to the fighter strength of the RAF, the German air force struck back at Britain with breakfast-time bombings in Western and Southern England, the Midlands, and into the home counties within fifty miles of London.

Two brief daylight alerts were sounded in the capital while residents of inland communities saw

Navy Men Given Silver Stars for Aid to MacArthur

Those Who Helped General and Nurses Escape Honored

SYDNEY, AUSTRALIA, July 27 (AP)—Silver stars have been awarded to men of the United States navy who helped bring General Douglas McArthur from the Philipines and who rescued nurses and army and navy officers from Corregidor.

The citation for chief machinists and mates Carl C. Richardson of Newcastle, Tex., Morris W. Hancock of Southport, Ind., and John Lawless of Norfolk, Va., referred to their motor torpedo boat trip with McArthur and said "they executed with marked skill and coolness a mission of strategic importance and of the most hazarous nature in the face of greatly superior enemy forces."

The following were honored for the daring flight of big flying boats in to Corregidor and out again in the rescue of the army and navy officers and nurses:

Lieut. Comm. E. T. Neale, Lieut. L. C. Deede, Lieut. Thomas F. Pollock, of Monrovia, Cal.; Lieut. William V. Gough, of Baltimore, Md., and Dave W. Bounds, Wallace D. Eddy, Mario Ferra, Leroy Casset, William F. Drexel, Edward W. Bedford, Windsor F. Kelly, Harold F. Donahue, Max A. Grain and Harold C. Ohr.

Racial Issues Mark Democratic Primary in State of Arkansas

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., July 27 (AP)—Racial issues, raised both by a negro organization and a congressional candidate, overshadow other issues in tomorrow's biennial statewide Democratic preferential primary election.

Negroes, working through their Arkansas negro Democratic Association, planned to try to vote in Little Rock, Pine Bluff and Forrest City despite a party regulation restricting primary voting privileges to "qualified white electors."

In the Fifth (Central) district, Lieut. Gov. Bob Bailey of Russellville, through newspaper advertisements, criticized Brooks Hays, former farm security administration official, for participation in the 1938 Birmingham, Ala., convention of the Southern Conference for Human Welfare at which an anti-Jim Crow law resolution was adopted.

Hays and Bailey are rivals for the congressional seat being vacated by Dave Terry, Little Rock, one of four candidates for United States senator. Hays denied he was present the day the resolution was adopted and criticized Bailey for raising the racial issue" at a time when civic groups and unselfish citizens are bending every effort to keep down friction."

Negro leaders and white authorities said they anticipated no trouble. Dr. J. M. Robinson, president of the Negro Association, instructed negroes to vote only for candidates for United States senator and congressman and to "bow politely and leave without ado" if they were refused a ballot. Police Chief J. A. Pitcock instructed Little Rock patrolmen to "keep a close watch around the polls."

At stake to morrow are nominations for senator, third and fifth district Congress seats, governor, land commissioner and supreme court justice.

Huge Increase In Taxes Asked By Senator Wiley

Would Pay Half of Federal Expenditures Out of Revenue

Committee Will Not Require Joint Returns by Couples

WASHINGTON, July 27 (AP)—A huge increase in taxation, so that half the government's expenditures would be met out of current revenue instead of borrowing, was advocated today by Senator Wiley (R-Wis).

"We should not consider for one moment passing on to the following of the cost of this war," he said in a Senate speech. "If we do we are pikers."

The pending $6,271,000,000 would bring total federal revenues to a total of only $22,000,000,000, he said, as against prospective war expenditures of $72,000,000,000 during the next twelve months.

Wiley suggested that "timid, mincing steps" be abandoned; that Congress raise $36,000,000,000 by taxation and insist that Americans buy $36,000,000,000 in war bonds.

Appeals to Senators

All senators voting for this plan, he said, could demonstrate leadership by pledging one-third of their net income to the purchase of government bonds.

The Senate Finance committee heard a proposal for "advancing the clock" on income tax collections by effecting a treasury bookkeeping operation which would credit this year's payments on 1942 instead of 1941 taxes, making collections current thereafter.

Beardsley Ruml, of R. H. Mack & Co., New York, advanced this suggestion in testimony on the $6,271,000,000 revenue bill. The plan, he said, would cancel every individual's 1941 income tax liability but would cost the treasury little of anything in revenues now.

Ruml Explains Plan

He said this could be accomplished by considering the payments made this year by individuals as collections on 1942, instead of 1941 income. For purposes of these payments, the individual would calculate his 1942 revenue at the exact amount of his actual revenue in 1941. By the end of this year, the witness said, all individuals then would have paid their current tax bill.

When the new bill's rates became effective on January 1, individuals then would begin paying their 1943 taxes in installments at the higher level.

Ruml explained that the government thus would obtain exactly as much money in tax payments as it would get otherwise, but would lose some revenue over the years as taxpayers died. A taxpayer who died, instead of owing on the preceding year's income, would have paid all of his taxes up to the time of his

American Bomber Outfights Japs

Escapes from Fleet of Zeroes Reported "As Thick As Flies"

SYDNEY Australia, July 27 (AP)—Demonstrating ability to take care of itself without fighter protection, even when attacked by a swarm of Japanese Zeroes "as thick as flies," an American four-motored bomber has returned to its base with two of its engines out of action and five cannon holes, sixty-two fragment holes and scores of bullet holes in its fuselage and wings.

Captain Maurice Morgan told the Sydney Morning Herald's correspondent that his gunners shot down two of the firfteen fighters while on decoinnaissance north of Australia.

"The Zeroes appeared suddenly, thick as flies," he said. "We hid in the clouds but they found up and knocked out one engine. From then on I don't think I flew a straight line more than 10 seconds.

"The Zeroes were so close we could hear their machineguns rattling and see the faces of the pilots."

Raid on Hamburg Heavy, Rome Says

LONDON, July 27 (AP) — The Rome radio was heard here tonight broadcasting that the RAF's raid last night on Hamburg was the heaviest thus far against Germany.

"German authorities tomorrow will probably give the number of casualties which is known to be very high," the broadcast said.

ACK-ACKS DOWN STUKA DIVE-BOMBER IN EGYPT

This photo shows a Stuka dive-bomber at the moment it crashed and burst into flame, somewhere in Egypt after having been brought down by British anti-aircraft fire. The Nazi pilot parachuted to safety and was taken prisoner by the British. This photo was radioed to New York from Cairo. The United States Air Command in Egypt announced that U. S. bombers had heavily damaged Axis ports and shipping at Tobruk and Bengazi in Libya and Suda Bay in Crete.

British Pushing Axis Army Back In Desert Battle

Both Sides Apparently Preparing for Major Offensive

By EWARD KENNEDY

CAIRO, EGYPT, July 27 (AP) — Renewing the aggressive tactics which pushed the Germans and Italians off a number of strategic ridges west of Al Alamein last week, Gen. Sir Claude Auchinleck's forces drove forward in the Egyptian desert again last night and today.

The limited offensive, opened last night in the northern sector following a week-end pause, resulted in the apture of prisoners and was continu today, British sources said.

The attack was launched while both sides were feverishly building up forces and supplies in expectation that a big operation will be undertaken shortly by one side or the other, and while the Germans and Italians were still under the disadvantage of hard and repeated blows by American and British airmen who delivered some of their mightiest assaults over the weekend against Marshal Rommel's supply lines and bases.

Tobruk again Attacked

The latest of these was Sunday night by a mixed force of British bombers which took advantage of a bright desert moon to assault Tobruk.

The British said that this big Sunday night assault touched off a train of fires and explosions, and that a cargo ship in the harbor, evidently jammed with explosives, blew up under the bombardment.

This followed a Saturday night attack in which ten United States four-motored bombers roared over the same sea base in the Americans' most successful raid since they have been battling by the side of the British in the desert.

Some of the big raiders dropped

German Planes Fly over London

Drop No Bombs, but Attack Other Places in England

LONDON, Tuesday, July 28 (AP)—German planes dodging British anti-aircraft fire flew over London and other areas in the home countries by the light of a full moon early today, but the only concentrated attack appeared to be at a West Midlands town where heavy explosives, and incendiar ybombs were dropped.

A few heavy bombs also were reported dropped in the home counties near London. The capital itself had a brief alert, but no bombings were reported here.

German planes also were reported over northern Ireland and northrn England, but there were no bombings reported in those areas.

Government Employees Get Pay Increase

WASHINGTON, July 27 (AP)—The Senate today passed and sent to the White House a bill raising the pay of 150,000 government employes in the lower brackets.

Among other things, the bill fixes $1,200 per year as the minimum for full-time adult employment, instead of 1,020.

Writs of Habeas Corpus Sought by Seven Nazis On Trial as Saboteurs

80, He Gets Post In the U. S. Navy

SAN FRANCISCO, July 27 (AP) George Sanderson is returning to the Navy at the age of 80.

Sanderson was unsuccessful in attempts to get back in until he traveled to Washington and got an order from Secretary Knox. He first entered the Navy in 1882 and served forty years.

Assigned to duty as an assistant recruiting officer, he is the oldest man in active service with the Navy.

Accused Germans Invoke Civil Rights of U. S. They Could Not Obtain in Nazi Germany

WASHINGTON, July 27 (AP)—Seven of the eight men accused of coming to America in Nazi U-boats to commit sabotage invoked the civil rights of this democracy today—and the United States Supreme Court broke off its vacation to hear their plea.

On Wednesday at noon, the tribunal will open a special term so that defense counsel may present petitions for writs of Habeas Corpus in behalf of the men, now on trial for their lives before a military commission appointed by President Roosevelt.

(The writ of Habeas Corpus is an ancient institution, the history of which is closely intertwined with the history of freedom in the English-speaking world. It has for its object the bringing of a prisoner before a court or judge, usually to determine whether he is being legally detained. Prisoners do not have such rights in Nazi Germany.)

Two Points for Court

The Supreme Court according to informed persons who were not willing to be quoted by name, will have two points to pass upon:

1. Whether it has any right to consider the petitions in view of a presidential order denying civil court processes to such prisoners.

2. Whether the military commissiorr has jurisdiction to try the men.

If the first point is decided negatively, the second will presumably not oe considered. If it is decided affirmatively and the court then decides the commission lacks jurisdiction over the cases, the 16-day proceedings of the commission would be nullified, one government legal authority said. The men then might be bound over to U. S. district court as if they had never gone before the commission.

The announcement of the special Supreme Court term, rare in recent history, was issued by Charles El-

American Fliers Save Chunking From Jap Raiders

American Warplanes Come To Rescue of Much Bombed City

By SPENCER MOOSA

CHUNGKING, July 27. (AP)—United States warplanes which roared out to meet a squadron of perhaps thirty Japanese raiders saved this often-bombed Chinese capital from attack tonight while its tens of thousands of people huddled anxiously in caves and shelters for two hours and five minutes through their first air raid alarm in eleven months.

It was not known immediately whether the American planes actually engaged the Japanese. However, not a single one of the raiders which roared in at dusk from across the eastern border of Szechwan province reached the vicinity of the capital.

Flock into Caves

The alarm sounded at 7:10 p. m. (7:10 a. m., Eastern War Time) and sent the city's residents streaming in long lines—each family carrying its most precious possessions—to the cramped caves where vegetable oil lamps flickered in the heat.

The scene was familiar. For the

Fleet of Cargo Planes Proposed As Answer to Submarine Attacks

WASHINGTON, July 27 (AP) — A fleet of giant cargo and troop-carrying planes was proposed in the Senate today as the only answer to the submarine menace.

Youthful Senator Lee (D-Okla) solemnly told his colleagues that air-borne transportation offered the "only possible chance we have of winning this war." It is folly, he said, to continue trying to "build ships faster than Hitler can sink them."

His resolution, calling for a special board to start immediate construction, was referred to the military affairs committee.

Lee said it had been estimated that ten per cent of Hitler's airplane production was devoted to giant flying boats, but that percentage was too small for United States needs.

"Our communication lines are many times longer than Hitler's and therefore the percentage of production devoted to transportation must be greater than that required for Hitler's needs."

Under Lee's resolution, the percentage of shipbuilding capacity that would be diverted to building flying boats would be left to the supply board composed of the secretaries of war and navy, the administrator of the War Shipping Administration and the chairman of the War Production Board.

This board would proceed immediately with construction of such flying boats and land-based airplanes for cargo and troop movement as it determined necessary to supply the needs of armed forces the world over.

The board would have full authority to determine types to be constructed and the number of shipbuilding yards and airplane factor-

Moscow Reports Steady Retreat Into Caucasus

Russians Forced Back After Bitter Fighting in Streets

One of Greatest Battles in History Still in Progress

MOSCOW, Tuesday, July 28 (AP)—An overwhelmed Red army has withdrawn from Rostov on the Don and from Novocherkask, twenty miles to the north-east, before the steady German drive into the Caucasus, the Soviet announced officially early today.

After fighting grimly in the streets of both shell-wrecked cities north of the Don river, the Russians retreated to unspecified positions south of the river.

(The Germans claimed the capture of both cities last week, and today said their troops also had taken Bataisk, twenty miles south of Rostov, on the main Caucasus railway and pipeline.)

Reds in Peril Along Don

The Russians also were imperilled all along the Don river as far east as Tsimlyansk, 120 miles from Rostov, where Germans machines and men continued to throw pontoon bridges across the Don faster than the Soviets could smash them.

The Russian communique at midnight bluntly told the nation:

"During July 27 our troops fought the enemy in the area of Voronezh and Novocherkask. Our troops have evacuated Novocherkask and Rostov."

Rostov's citizen army of men, women and children in a Herculean effort joined hands with the Red army last November to repulse huge German forces which had entered the city. The Nazis withdrew in which was the turning point in Hitler's 1941 campaign against Russia. Rostov was the first major objective which Nazi troops had surrendered since Narvik in Norway.

Known as the "spigot of the Russian oil barrel," the city of 500,000 was a big transportation terminus for Caucasian oil and foods, and a shipbuilding center near the corner of the Sea of Azov.

Today's war bulletin said of the Tsimlyansk area:

"The enemy repeatedly attempted to cross the river. Fighting is going on with fluctuating successes.

"In one sector the Germans succeeded in pushing forward but were stemmed by a counter-attack of Soviet troops and lost during this engagement 350 officers and men killed."

Many Pontoons Wrecked

The phase "fluctuating successes" bore out press dispatches which acknowledged the Germans were

London Newspaper Against Marshall As Generalissimo

Demands Briton Be Given Command of Second Front

LONDON, Tuesday, July 28 (AP)—The tabloid Daily Mirror in a front page editorial today said that any allied generalissimo for a second front should not be an American.

Commenting on reports that Gen. George C. Marshall, chief of staff of the United States army, might be named allied generalissimo, the paper said that when British, American and Canadian troops undertake a second front, "the proper person to command it is a general with active experience in this war against the Germans."

"The ability of American leaders, however great, has not yet been tested beyond the examination room," the editorial continued. It criticized "minority opinion in this country" that British generals were unfit to command an Allied force.

News of 1864 Same As It Is Today

BOISE, Idaho, July 27 (AP) — The Boise Daily Statesman, completing its seventy-eighth year of publication, told its readers a war was being fought and the weather was hot, the same things it reported in the first edition on July 26, 1864.

The newspaper was established by James S. Reynolds and acquired in 1889 by the late Calvin Cobb whose daughter, Mrs. Margaret Cobb Ailshie, is the present publisher.

Christoforidis Wins a Decision Over Mose Brown

Cleveland Fighter Takes Main Bout of Pittsburgh Card

By GILBERT STALEY

PITTSBURGH, July 27 (AP)—Anton Christoforidis of Cleveland, former NBA light heavyweight champion, won a decision tonight over Mose Brown of McKeesport, Pa., in the main bout of a charity boxing card featuring five 10-round bouts before 15,000 fans. Brown weighed 171 and Christoforidis 167.

Results of the four other matches:

Ezzard Charles of Cincinnati, 163, knocked out Booker Beckwith, 171, of Chicago, in 2 minutes and 19 seconds of the ninth round.

Fritzie Zivic, 148½, of Pittsburgh, former welterweight champion, was awarded a technical knockout over Norman Rubio, 147½, of Albany, N. Y., when a Pennsylvania State Boxing Commission chairman refused to permit Rubio to start the ninth round because his eyes were badly cut.

Harry Bobo, of Pittsburgh, 206, won a technical knockout over Claudio Villar, 204½, of Spain, in 2 minutes and 18 seconds of the fourth round.

Joey Maxim, 183, of Cleveland, won a decision over Curtis Sheppard, 181½, of Pittsburgh.

The main bout produced only one knockdown, Brown getting up without a count in the second round when Christoforidis caught him with a left to the stomach. Brown, his right continually cocked, was unable to throw more than one good punch in succession as Christoforidis kept tying him up.

The Associated Press gave only the first and ninth rounds to Brown. In the ninth, Brown momentarily staggered Christoforidis with a right which brought blood to the former champion's nose but the Clevelander rallied and won going away in the tenth as Brown was hanging on, tired.

Mexican Freighter Torpedoed in Gulf

MEXICO CITY, July 27 (AP)—The Mexican freighter Oaxaca was torpedoed yesterday morning while enroute to Tampico from New Orleans, the manager of the government-controlled Mexican Navigation Company, operators of the vessel, announced tonight.

The Oaxaca was the fifth Mexican ship lost by enemy submarine action in the Gulf of Mexico. The company manager, Gonzalo Abaunza, said it had not been learned immediately whether there were any casualties.

Moscow Reports

flowing across the Don despite the wrecking of numerous Nazi pontoons by Scout airmen and artillery.

The retreat south of Rostov further endangered the Soviets because it increased the possibilities of a Nazi attack on the Red flank from the German-held Crimea.

The outlook for the Russians was admittedly darker than ever now because the Soviet people had hoped that the Don barrier would be held at any cost. But all Russian dispatches repeatedly emphasized the numerical superiority of the attacking Nazi army.

Not only is the Caucasus rich in oil and grain, but it is the gateway for allied supplies from the middle east. Its severance from the Russian hinterland would be an extremely heavy jolt to the Red military machine.

Weather Favors Nazis

The Germans also have the advantage of several months of good fighting weather ahead.

Only in the Voronezh area 300 miles north of Rostov were the Russians claiming any distinct successes. There the Red Army was reported to have made another crossing of the Don to the western bank after wiping out thousands of Nazi troops.

But the Russian successes in the Voronezh area thus far have not endangered the left flank enough to stem the southeastward German tide which threatens the Caucasus and Stalingrad on the Volga communications route.

Russian dispatches said the lower Don river bteween Rostov and Tsimlyansk was breached only at terrific cost to the Germans—but that the Germans did cross.

Thousands of dead Germans littered the banks of the river or slipped downstream in the swift current along with smashed pontoons, these dispatches said. But long coils of German reserves always were there to take the place of the fallen, the Russians admitted.

This new, surging enemy tide and a bracing central resistance by the Red armies, coupled with aerial warfare of a scope and intensity hitherto unexceeded turned this encounteris of tangling masses into one of the greatest battles of history.

It was obviously the most important battle fought on Russian soil since the Germans first crunched into Russia's western buffer front on June 22 last year. The oil, mineral and agricultural riches of the Caucasus are at stake and with them Russia's southern lifeline from her Allies in the Middle East.

Put on Terrific Show

Both the Germans and the Russians put on a terrific show in the skies, according to advices reaching Moscow.

Day and night the heavens were filled with fighters and bombers, the Russians drawing heavily on planes from the United States. The roar and whine of planes in twisting combat, the blasting of aerial cannon and the thunderous burst of bombs at times blanketed the tumult of the battle aground.

The whole steppe land inside the Don bend and the river slopes in places were spotched by wildfire of battle. Fires spread through the ripening grainfields which provided ideal terrain for tanks maneuvering by the hundreds.

With typical restraint, the early morning Russian communique said that fighting had continued through Sunday night at Voronezh, 300 miles north of Rostov, on the harassed northern flank of Germany's broad southern drive, and in addition to the areas of Rostov, Novacherkassk and Tsimlyansk.

Admit One Crossing

Only in the last area have the Russians admitted crossings of the Don by the enemy. Tsimlyansk lies upstream, about 120 airline miles from Rostov, which is at the Sea of Azov estuary. Novocherkassk is twenty miles northeast of Rostov, and, like Rostov, on the north side of the river.

(The Germans, having claimed previously the capture of both Rostov and Norocherkassk and subsequent crossings of the Don both east and south of Rostov, announced Monday that shock troops, using an approach cleared by warplanes, had captured Bataisk, twenty miles south of Rostov, on the main Caucasus railway and pipeline.

(The Germans also said that their eastbound forces had reached the Don bend on a broad front facing Stalingrad. Berlin indicated that the attackers were within fifty miles of Stalingrad and added that violent air attacks had been launched against Stalingrad river and railway communications.)

The Russians said little today about the position of Stalingrad and as to Rostov said only that the enemy had broken into "the heart of our defenses."

Near Tsimlyansk, where the Russians had conceded two German bridgeheads established on the southern shore of the Don, the communique said, "stubborn fighting for crossings is in progress."

"The Germans are trying to force the river Don simultaneously in several places . . . in one sector a big tank battle is in progress . . . Our men have pinned down numerically superior forces and prevented them from advancing," it added.

In continuing Russian attacks at Voronezh about 1,000 Germans had been killed in a single day in one sector.

British Pushing

their loads through clouds, the returning Americans said, but others got a good view of the target and said the largest gasoline fires they ever saw in the desert port lighted the whole area.

Drops Nine Big Bombs

Lieut. Ernest Duckworth, of Providence, R. I., bombardier navigator on a plane piloted by First Lieut. Mark T. Mooty, of Winterhaven, Fla., said he dropped a string of nine heavy bombs along a pipeline carrying fuel from the waterfront to inland dumps and that a long livid line of fire spread with startling speed across the desert. The fire was growing bigger after two hours and the RAF news service said it raged all night.

"Man, oh man," exclaimed another American airman, a rear gunner, "just what I always wanted to see! Must have been a munitions dump, or gasoline. Oh boy, what an explosion!"

All Fliers Return

Every one of the seventy men and all ten machines returned safely.

While the British were bombing Tobruk last night other far-ranging fighters attacked Axis barges off Sidi Barrani, and other light bombers dropped bombs on artillery, anti-aircraft and other positions in the battle zone.

Much greater damage than first reported also was done in a raid on Candia airdrome in Crete Saturday night, reconnaissance disclosed today.

While activity at the front was limited to a few artillery shots and skirmishes between patrols, British quarters believed this was only a breathing space and that either Gen. Sir Claude Auchinleck or Marshal Rommel would make a new thrust as soon as sufficient supplies and reserves are on hand

O'Conor Appointed To Guard Auxiliary

ANNAPOLIS, Md., July 27 (AP)—Governor O'Conor received official notice today of his appointment as a member of the United States coast guard auxiliary.

Hamburg,

black-cross-marked bombers for the first time in many months.

About thirty German planes participated in the scattered raids, striking out of cloud cover. Casualties were reported in a number of sections, but the air ministry said relatively little damage was caused.

Big Shipyards Bombed

The big Blohm and Voss shipyards, said to be capable of building twenty-five submarines at a time, were believed to have been one of the RAF's principal targets at Hamburg.

Other objectives were the seaplane factory, oil refineries, explosive works and mipes of docks which have been battered six times this year and ninety-one since the start of the war.

The air ministry news service said the first wave of bombers dropped all the explosives they could carry in one concentrated blast at the city.

The second wave swept over within thirty-five minutes, showering down high explosives and incendiaries.

Much of Town Afire

"Much of the old town was on fire," the news service reported.

"There were fires all around Aussen-Alster Lake, and there were many in the dock area."

"Pillars of black smoke were rising but as yet they were not drifting over the town. The target was clearly exposed for the attack of the last wave of bombers, and these were fully loaded with high explosives, including many 4,000-pound bombs."

The appearance of United States army fighter pilots in weekend RAF forays over the continent further tipped the scales in favor of the Allies in the long struggle for mastery of the air.

Now the United States fighter pilots are flying British Spitfires, but later they are expected to have their own latest United States models.

Commenting on the announcement that Germany's vaunted new Focke-Wulfe 109 fighters were seen in large numbers during the RAF sweep over France, one RAF source said:

"The eighty FW-109's seen Sunday points to additions to the German fighter force, but our own considerable forces plus the growing assistance given by American fighters and our own new types should more than compensate for the Luftwaffe reinforcements."

ies that would be converted to the flying boats.

Quotes Hitler's Promise

Lee said Hitler, with 100 submarines plying the seas and at least 200 more ready for action soon, had "made good" his threat to cut the supply lines of the United Nations and could continue to build "several submarines while we are building one ship."

The answer, he said, was "so simple that some experts can't understand it."

"I do not propose that we stop all shipbuilding," he said, "but I do endorse the proposal of Henry Kaiser, the shipbuilding wizard, that a part of our shipbuilding capacity be diverted from the construction of ships to the construction of flying boats."

Roosevelt Forms War Relief Board

Places Joseph E. Davies at Head of Latest Agency

WASHINGTON, July 27 (AP) — President Roosevelt today set up a war relief control board, headed by Joseph E. Davis, with broad powers to regulate agencies collecting welfare funds for use in the United States or abroad.

Davies was formerly ambassador to Russia and Belgium.

The board will have charge of registering or licensing war relief agencies, coordinating the times and amounts of funds-raising campaigns, and establishing standards of solicitation. It can require financial reports and merge or eliminate agencies in the interest of efficiency or economy.

The former committee on war relief, also headed by Davis, was reconstituted to form the new War Relief Control Board.

The new presidential order means that Davies's organization will have jurisdiction over the collections of funds for the United Service Organizations and other domestic relief agencies, whereas heretofore its authority extended only to organizations like the British and China war relief agencies.

However, the board will not exercise such powers over the Red Cross, local charitable activities of a normal character, or established religious bodies.

British Warships

enough to keep vital supply dumps and equipment well within the desert, out of range of the naval guns.

The Nazis' use of Matruh as their most advanced seaport gave the British just what they were looking for — a good target. They have plastered it thoroughly, with an estimated 2,000 shells in six bombardments of the harbor and the adjoining area.

Naval officers say these attacks with shellfire and bombs must have had a serious effect on the enemy's immediate supplies of ammunition and gasoline. These two items formed the bulk of the cargoes of every ship unloaded there in recent weeks or which tried to reach the shallow waters of the harbor.

Problem for Axis

How much use the enemy will be able to make of the port in the immediate future is a question but it's a safe bet that, as fast as he builds jetties to discharge cargoes, the British will be there to destroy them.

There wasn't much left of Matruh the last time I saw the sunbaked little town in daylight.

Most of its buildings had gaping holes from bombs or shells, so that it should be flatter than a dome now. During night bombardments it's hard to see the full extent of the damage from a warship or a navy plane. But one can see the huge explosions of ammunition and fuel dumps, and in the light of these flares see buildings and barracks ripped wide open and sections flung high into the air.

It doesn't take a naval technician to know that warships usually are no match for efficiently operated and well-trained heavy shore batteries, which should be able to get beeline aim on any attacking warships merely from the flashes of their guns. But shells bursting over the decks of their ships with a rain of splinters have not deterred the British.

Battle of Tripoli

Their contempt for the opposition was demonstrated to me in the biggest bombardment in history, the shelling of Tripoli on April 23, 1941, which I witnessed from a warship. The battle fleet put a thousand tons of high explosive, armor-piercing shells into Tripoli that night in less than forty-five minutes.

The Tripoli bombardment, like subsequent ones and the current show at Matruh, have proved the effectiveness of navy cooperation with the air force.

At Tripoli the warships poured several hundred tons of shells at their targets before the Barbary coast nest of Nazis and Fascists knew they were being attacked from the sea. They thought the air force, which had staged an earlier attack, was still bombing.

Naval aircraft have done much to combat the menace of the Nazi submarines which, for a time, seemed to flock into the Mediterranean from the Atlantic. While it's difficult to say how many were sunk, it's a pretty good guess that a dozen never saw the light of day again.

last three years the Japanese have subjected the crowded city to heavy air raids from mid-May, when the spring fogs end, to September.

This year, however, the Flying Tigers of the AVG and later the United States army air force in China have kept the city raid-free.

Fighting in Kiangsi

On the ground, fighting continued in eastern Kiangsi province where Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek's high command said the Chinese were trying to win back still more of the Chekiang-Kiangsi railway.

A communique said fighting was under way south of Kintang, which the Chinese recaptured last week. Chinese pressure on Kweiki, one of the principal stations along the central section of the rail line, was described as increasing.

He declared also that the cancellation order already had become effective, and that the committee did not want to be put in a position where responsibility for any errors could be laid to its "interference."

The sub-committee, concentrating on a study of the reported steel shortage, heard Reese H. Taylor, chief of the war production's iron and steel branch, declared that the "total demand of all agencies for steel is greater than the supply."

Air Raid Warden's Light On in Blackout

LANSING, Mich., July 27 (AP) — It was embarrassing, but a fact.

Harry S. Applegate, Lansing's chief air raid warden, admitted today that lights were left burning in the offices of the State Defense Council and the State Welfare Commission during last night's half-hour practice blackout. Applegate is responsible for the offices.

INTERPRETING THE WAR NEWS

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

Berlin says the Russian defense line along the lower Don is tottering under terrific hammer blows from Rostov eastward to the great bend of the river fifty miles less from Stalingrad and the Volga.

And Moscow admits that at least two bridgeheads on the south bank of the river are in enemy hands east of the Donets inflow. Whether the Nazis' claim to have captured Bataisk Junction, twenty miles south of Rostov on the main rail and pipeline routes in the Caucasus, represents a third crossing of the Don or a flanking operation down the south bank of the river is not clear.

It makes little difference. In either case the plight of the whole Russian left flank is critical if Bataisk has been taken. That could represent entrapment of all Russian forces south of the Don below the Donets confluence to the sea of Azov, and collapse of the lower Don defense line at its strongest point.

Threat to Oil Fields

Bataisk is a point on the Rostov-Baku railroad where a highway takes off westward to the town of Azov on one of the multiple mouths of the Don. In German hands that junction not only represents an immediate threat to the Maikop oil fields, less than 200 miles farther south, but a possible new sea-borne flanking invasion route to the Caucasus from Tagonrog. It is less than thirty miles airline from Tagonrog to Azov across the narrowing northeastern arm of the sea of Azov below Rostov.

The whole northwestern bulge of the Caucasus to the Maikop oilfields could be quickly cut off by a further German surge southward from Bataisk. While that field itself is of minor importance compared to the great Caspian shore pools, the Germans, if they reached it, would be astride both routes to Baku. They would be in a position to strike down both the north and south flanks of the forbidding Caucasus range even if they had failed to reach the Volga beyond the Don bend.

Berlin asserted that the Don had been crossed east of the Donets confluence several days before Moscow admitted bridgeheads had been established on the south bank in that region. There was no mention of the Bataisk operation from Moscow as this was written, but specific German claims of that nature rarely have proved incorrect. The probabilities are, therefore, that Bataisk has been at least invested.

However this new and most menacing German thrust into the Caucasus was achieved, it has only one encouraging aspect from an allied nation viewpoint. It tends to confirm the impression that the whole Nazi offense revolves around Hitler's urgent necessity of obtaining new and considerable oil sources before winter closes in again. The tremendous scope of his offensive operations in Russia is drawing heavily on his reserve stocks of natural or synthetic fuels, as is his long-distance sea blockade campaign in American waters.

It goes without saying that the Maikop region wells, refineries and pipe line will be destroyed under the scorched-earth policy if the threat becomes more imminent. Destruction crews are probably already assigned to do the job and do it thoroughly.

Even with pipe line or rail connections with the Caspian fields broken, Russian needs could be served by sea and Volga barges so long as Red armies retained control of that transportation means.

There can be small doubt, however, that very considerable Russian forces along the lower Don below the Donets inflow and in the northwestern triangle of the Caucasus which fronts on the sea of Azov are in deadly peril if the Germans are already behind them at Bataisk.

A desperate retreat southward before the trap closes completely may confront the whole southern flank of Marshal Timoshenko's line if the claimed Nazi spearhead at Bataisk cannot be pinched off without de-

PLANS FOR SCRAP METAL CAMPAIGN WILL BE DISCUSSED TODAY

Representatives of service stations and gasoline dealers in Cumberland will meet in the chamber of commerce offices this morning at 10 o'clock to discuss tentative plans for a city-wide scrap metal collection campaign that will get under way here shortly.

The scrap metal drive will be conducted in a manner similar to that used in the recent rubber campaign held here.

Joseph A. Schriver, president of the Allegany County Retail Gasoline Dealer's Association, has volunteered co-operation of that group in the drive and persons who turn in scrap metal to the service stations will be paid at the rate of one-half cent per pound.

Only the Salvation Army and local junk dealers are collecting scrap under present arrangements.

W. Donald Smith is chairman of the local drive.

Public Will Judge Prints in Camera Contest at Picnic

Persons attending the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Veterans and Auxiliary picnic tomorrow in Constitution park will be given an opportunity to cast ballots in the print contest of the Cumberland Miniature Camera Club.

Members of the club are urged to have their pictures ready at the park by 6 p. m., or to turn over their prints to the Harvey Jewelry Store, Baltimore street, by 5 p. m. The judging will be conducted between 6:15 and 7:45 p. m., at the wild life building in the park.

A bathing beauty contest will be held at the park pool in conjunction with the picnic.

More Entries Expected For Annual Tri-State Horse Pulling Contest

More entries are wanted for the horse pulling contest which will be one of the features of Cumberland Fair and Race meet, which gets underway August 4. The horse pulling contest is scheduled for Thursday August 13, at 8 p. m.

Several teams are entered by farmers in the Tri-State area, but other entries will still be accepted.

The contest is held under the supervision of the University of Maryland Extension Service and the United States Department of Agriculture. Pulling power will be measured on a dynamometer.

Two classes will compete. One over 3,000 pounds and a smaller class for teams under 3,000 pounds and sixteen hands.

more Cropley, clerk of the court. It said:

"The chief justice directs that it be announced that the Supreme Court will convene a special term on Wednesday, July 29, at noon, in order that petitions for writs of Habeas Corpus, on behalf of certain persons now being tried by a military commission appointed by the president, may be submitted to it.

"The petitions will be presented by counsel on July 29 and the prisoners will not be present at the bar of the supreme court on that day."

Eight Believed Signing

The announcement did not say how many of the prisoners were petitioning, but other sources said seven. There was unofficial speculation that the man who did not petition is George John Dasch. He is reported to have given the FBI valuable information and is represented by separate defense counsel.

All the prisoners are defended by United States army officers, who are duty-bound to present the best case possible.

The presentation of testimony before the military commission was completed by both sides during the day, after sixteen days of hearings, and the case was adjourned until Thursday. Three or four hours of argument is expected before the Supreme Court in a public session.

Final Arguments Thursday

If the court refuses to entertain the petitions, the military commission will hear final arguments from both sides starting Thursday, and proceed to consider a verdict.

To convene the special term, the nine Supreme Court justices had to be summoned from their homes and vacation retreats throughout the country. Farthest away was Justice Douglas in Oregon; he already is on the train; Justice Murphy, in the army as a lieutenant colonel under leave of absence, was on maneuvers at Dillworth, N. C., but court attaches said he had agreed to be on hand.

Chief Justice Stone, vacationing in New Hampshire, and all the other justices, will be present.

death and the government eventually would lose one year's collections from him, the witness explained.

The committee junked today treasury proposals to require joint income tax returns by married couples and to levy federal taxes against the revenue from outstanding issues of state and municipal bonds.

Thus cutting of $620,000,000 in potential additions to the $6,271,000,000 tax bill previously approved by the House, the committee voted to leave open for further consideration three other treasury suggestions calculated to boost the measure's total by approximately $290,000,000.

These proposals, on which Chairman George (D-Ga) announced that testimony would be taken at hearings, were:

Would Revise Tax Laws

Revision of the law governing federal taxation of income in the eight so-called community property states of Texas, Louisiana, Arizona, New Mexico, Idaho, Nevada, Washington and California to bring them more in line with other states.

Federal taxation of future issues of state and municipal bonds.

Elimination of the present 27½ per cent flat allowance for depreciation in oil and mining adventures and substitution of a cost depletion method.

George said the committee had not discussed the treasury's major proposals for additions of approximately $1,100,000,000 in general individual and corporation income taxes. He observed that these and other treasury suggestions, as well as outside proposals for such levies as a sales tax, still were before the committee for study.

By what was reported to have been a fourteen to two vote, the committee eliminated from consideration the treasury's suggestion that all married couples be required to pay taxes on their combined incomes as though it were one income—a change which experts estimated would bring in $420,000,000 more in revenue in a year.

Taxes of Married People

At the same time, however, the committee was reported to have voted nine to six to study the question of requiring persons in community states to file returns on earned income actually received by them, and be taxed accordingly. At present a man in one of those states can divide his income with his wife for tax purposes. Sometimes their total taxes are lower than if each had to file returns on income actually received.

The vote against federal taxation of the income from outstanding issues of state and municipal bonds also was said to have been fourteen to two. What was described as large majority, however, favored taxation of future issues.

The treasury had estimated that taxation of outstanding issues would raise about $200,000,000 but taxes on future issues were calculated to yield only about $3,000,000 in the first year.

The group was said to have voted nine to six to hold open for future study the question of changing oil and mining depletion calculation methods.

O'Keefe Will Take Over Quiz Show On Air Network

Ted Husing Program Will Come from Camp Edwards

By C. E. BUTTERFIELD

NEW YORK, July 27 — Walter O'Keefe, the young man of the ex-flying trapeze — remember that song? — has got himself another radio job. Beginning Tuesday night at 9 he takes over the job of asking in the NBC quiz show, the Battle of the Sexes, the program which had Frank Crumit and Julia Sanderson for so long. This will be in addition to his assignment in the Sunday night vaudeville series, and could mean that Walter is well on his way to microphone comeback.

Ted Husing and the Cheers from the Camps are to stop off at Camp Edwrads, Mass., for the CBS broadcast at 9:30. One of the features is to be a sound and voice effect of artillery in action. The Cab Calloway quiz on the Blue is changing time again, the latest scheduling putting it at 10:15.

Murder Clinic Drama

"Tale of the Ordinary Hairpins" by E. C. Bentley will be the Murder Clinic drama on MBS at 9:30 for its second program.

The Living Art, a new CBS series at 4:30, will have some words about "Art under Hitler," with the aforesaid words supplied by Wallace R. Deuel, foreign correspondent, and George Grosz, German-American cartoonist. Rep. Emanuel Celler, of New York, Democrat, is to discuss "Espionage" for CBS at 10:30.

Just to put you straight NBC has twenty-two fifteen minute periods in its daytime schedule, morning and afternoon, set aside for serial scripts—or, as they say in radio, "soap operas."

The talk on "Abuse of Patents" by Thurman Arnold, assistant attorney general, will be carried by MBS at 9:15.

The Primary Gets Off to a Start

THE ENTRANCE LISTINGS for the September primary election have been closed and citizens now have a pretty good idea as to the make-up of the ballots therein, although close attention with active campaigning will probably not be given until after August 8, the time limit afforded for withdrawals. There could possibly be new entrants via the petition method, but that is hardly to be expected.

Doubtless there will be some more withdrawals and the contests as at present aligned will be narrowed down. In a few instances there is good reason for that and good reasons for expecting them.

The Republicans have two candidates for governor, Theodore R. McKeldin, Baltimore attorney, and W. Pinkney West, Jr., sales manager of the Keystone Automobile Club, also of Baltimore, who got under the wire at the last minute. Whether both will remain after August 8 remains to be seen. The two vacancies on the state ticket will be filled by the state central committee.

Here in Allegany county, the Republicans have a substantial listing of candidates, fifty as against only thirty trotted out by the Democrats. In some instances there will be no contests, but in others there will be a sufficient number of aspirants to make interesting races. Participants would do well in seeing that these are made in true sportsmanship manner.

Of especial importance in this primary campaign will be the selection of congressional nominees. This newspaper is glad, indeed, that former Senator J. Glenn Beall, of this county, has entered the list for representative and it believes he will be the winner hands down, considering the assurances of widespread support he has received from other counties in the district, especially Montgomery and Frederick and, quite naturally, Garrett and Allegany will go solidly for him.

The News is quite favorably impressed with Mr. Beall's platform. He is the type of man needed today in Congress, level-headed, fair, experienced, deservedly popular and fully alive to the issues of the day as indicated in his announcement. Not only will he be chosen in the primary if Mr. Triesler, of Hagerstown, the only other entrant, permits a contest to obtain, but there are splendid prospects that, with the bitter internecine struggle between Representative Byron and E. Brooke Lee, of Montgomery county, on the Democratic side, he will be a winner, although many other and more important considerations apply in his favor.

Ordinarily, The News does not take part in primary contests, but in this instance it will make no bones about supporting Mr. Beall both in the primary and the election campaigns because it believes not only that he is admirably qualified but also because it believes the things for which he stands should find translation into legislative doings in Washington as being in consonance with the desires of the people of this district. This newspaper expects to have considerable to say in this respect as time waxes onward.

Still Somewhat Of a Puzzler

SOME are still puzzled as to the purposes of Secretary Hull's address to the nation, which had been so widely advertised with presidential backing as a most important utterance. While the address was replete with moral concepts as to the purposes of the war, with which all Americans can agree, it yet seems a bit strange why he should have spent so much time on them particularly as he proffered nothing new, and that was what the people were expecting.

The secretary did utilize his address, however, to a good purpose in advising the neutrals, including Argentina, that neutrality in this global war is both ridiculous and impossible, and it is to be hoped that the advice will strike home where it should.

Some have regarded the secretary's exposition of international trade as his seizure of the opportunity to further his ideas on free trade, of which in the past he has been an ardent advocate. However, there could be detected a softening of the New Deal attitude on that subject. He urged the reduction of "excessive" free trade barriers. Use of that term implied acknowledgment of the propriety of trade barriers that are not excessive. That is quite a concession, indeed, from Mr. Hull. If he has moderated his views to accept the need of some trade regulations, he and the Republican protectionists are pretty much on the same ground, their only difference being as to what can be regarded as excessive and what is not. This is not to say that mistakes on this score have not been made in the past.

As for the peace situation, the secretary quite properly stressed the necessity of winning the war first. As for his advocacy of some international vehicle of justice and some means of maintaining peace by force if necessary, his general views are in accord with the post-war policy as generally understood and accepted by the American people.

Our Congress Flees Homeward

DESPITE the critical war situation, congressmen are flocking to their homes from their posts of duty in Washington. The reason is the election campaign. All members of the House and a third of the Senate membership are to be chosen and the great majority want re-election.

Fourteen states will hold primary elections in August and sixteen in September. Primaries have already been held in fourteen states and four more will make their nominations in conventions.

House leaders were given permission to go home Saturday when Speaker Rayburn advised that "there is nothing in sight in the future as far as a program is concerned." Representative Cox, of Georgia, translated this as notice that members "will be perfectly safe in going home." The Senate is expected to release its members this week.

Under this system, a presiding officer and one member will put in an appearance each third day in each house and go through the motions of meeting and recessing. Thus the Congress will be kept technically alive with the membership far from Washington.

Thus again politics paralyzes an important part of the national government. So far as that is concerned, perhaps the members might as well be at their homes as in Washington, for, as Frank R. Kent has declared in his Baltimore Sun column, politics has been paralyzing both the executive and legislative branches anyway. "It is politics," he says, "which prevents them from functioning as clearheaded statesmen in a world crisis and turns them into scared little demagogs, willing to imperil the national interests rather than incur a possible political risk."

This abandonment of duty comes at a time when one of the most important measures ever confronting the nation is being framed. That is the new tax bill, which will touch the people heavily and which, as so far framed, is the source of grave apprehensions respecting the domestic economy.

This Congress, which is scampering home like a bunch of scared rabbits, is the Congress which the administration wants the people to retain in office, and if anybody doesn't like that he is "helping Hitler." But certainly this Congress by its abandonment of duty and its subservience to political considerations, affords excellent reason why it should for the most part be permitted by the people not only to return home but to remain there while more attentive and solicitious members are sent to Washington.

Life Gets Pretty Tough in Italy

LIVING has become pretty tough in Italy, according to United States diplomats back from that country.

The bread ration is down to three tiny cornmeal biscuits a day, meat is almost non-existent, a ham costs 4,000 liras, or about $200; a chicken bring 150 liras, or $7.50; leather can't be had at any price and suits no longer contain wool.

And on top of all this, Germany is demanding that the Italians send them greater supplies of food against which the Germans are withholding coal shipments.

His people must be wondering by now why Mussolini jumped into the war.

If any of those eastern political candidates who have special ration cards do run out of fuel they can talk through the gas feed lines.

Mussolini, according to a correspondent, draws a salary of $10,000 a year. The Italians are overpaying him — by about $10,000.

Why Do Women Grow Up?

By MARSHALL MASLIN

Women grow up. . . . Not all of them, to be sure. . . . But too many of them for a man's peace of mind.

Marshall Maslin

Little girls are older than little boys. Maidens are older than youths. Women are older than men, wives than husbands, daughters than their fathers. It's very annoying for my sex—and sometimes it's very irritating for the sex that grows older.

Men LOOK as though they were as old as women. They pretend to BE. They grow beards and hold down jobs solemnly and talk earnestly about their "work" and their "ambitions" and their "achievements." They run for office and take out insurance policies and "put over deals" and get on their dignity and "safeguard their future" and talk about posterity and erect a magnificent facade of maturity in front of them.

But it's mostly a fake and they slip back into childhood at the least excuse. They go crazy about such things as football . . . or golf . . . or bridge . . . or even business. Even business they sometimes treat as though it were a game instead of as a means of earning a living. . . . They're odd creatures. They don't grow up. Not all the way, at least. Not through and through.

But most women do. Even the youngest woman feels immeasurably older than the oldest man. She may admire a man's ability, respect his strength, but she is firmly convinced that, after all, he is "just a big child." She is grown up and he isn't.

This is most annoying—to the men. They fool other men and they don't see why they can't fool the women. It's upsetting to a man who has lived along for forty or fifty years and piled up a considerable reputation for solidity and maturity—and then suddenly discovers that the woman who knows him best still looks upon him as a child. And is able to prove it to him—if he wants to argue the matter.

It's not right. It's taking an unfair advantage. But the men will NEVER change. Because, in their hearts they know it's more exciting if a part of you never grows up. More painful at times, but also more fun.

Paul Mallon Says Parity Wage Plan Is Not a Solution

By PAUL MALLON

WASHINGTON, July 27 — Labor personages have been running in and out of the White House for the past two weeks. With each one has emerged a new rumor, bearing an official flavor, of what President Roosevelt intends to do about rising wages.

Paul Mallon

First, it was virtually announced that he would send a message to Congress asking that both wages and prices be frozen. But visitors Phil Murray and William Green, representing one-sixth of the nation's workers who are in CIO or AFL, protested such a course.

Later word relayed from the inside suggested the president would order the freezing by executive decree without congressional action.

But at his last press conference, while declining to say what steps he would take to dissipate the rising spectre of inflation, he used a strange new phrase—"parity wages."

This ominous phrase seems already to have been adopted by the government as its wage policy (Leon Henderson dissenting). Mr. Roosevelt appears already to have worked out and applied his solution without announcement.

Yardstick Adopted

I understand the War Labor Board has followed up its Little Steel decision with the adoption of a fifteen percent wage increase yardstick measured back to January 1, 1941. That is, the board has decided the cost of living has gone up fifteen percent since that date, and therefore wages should be fifteen percent higher.

In the case of Little Steel, the unions had already received a ten percent increase last April (when Ernest Weir bolted the steel manufacturers and ordered a hike without warning.) Therefore, the board gave Little Steel an additional five percent increase this time, or forty-four cents a day, to bring the total since January 1941 up to fifteen percent.

The War Labor Board has suggested to the United States Conciliation Service, John R. Steelman, director, that it try to settle all wage isues on the same basis. If a union has had fifteen percent increase, it is to get no more. If it has had eight percent, presumably it is to have another seven percent.

About half of the eight million organized workers in the country are supposed to have received their fifteen percent increase already. Nearly all the others have received some increase.

Meat for Laborites

This program is meat for Ma Perkins, Murray and Green, the WLB and other laborites in the government, but has Mr. Henderson tearing his clothes and tossing them out the window.

No greater evidence that "parity wages" will not stop inflation, but will help to bring it about, could possibly be found than the fact Henderson is against it, and trying to stop it.

"Parity wages" is nothing but a nice excusing phrase for wage increases, which will cause price increases and eventually more wage increases. It has an old political ring.

The farmers concocted the phrase "parity farm prices," in order to keep prices continually going up. And when some of their prices finally reached parity a few months back they moved their goal up to 110 percent of parity. So it will be with such a wage program.

Mr. Henderson warned Sunday that food prices were going up, meaning the cost of living is now on the way to higher levels.

Spiral Predicted

When this happens, labor will come back again and ask for another increase, and the farmers will have a similar increase, and the whole vicious spiral of one helping the other to force both wages and prices into high inflationary levels, will inevitably proceed.

Meanwhile the other 42,000,000 workers in the country whose economic welfare seems to be ignored in this government's managed war economy, will find all values of everything they own and earn shrinking as the spiral of ambitions of the unions and farmers forces prices into ever higher ground.

Mr. Henderson is right, but there seems no prospect that he will win. His demand for the arbitrary freezing of all wages and prices at existing levels can gain little sympathy in Congress, which must face an election in November, or in the administration where the labor and farm groups are most highly respected.

Henderson Warns

Mr. Henderson has been trying to keep wages from forcing prices up by warning business men in private phone calls, correspondence and through the press, that any wage increases undertaken by employers without an order from the War Labor Board, will not be considered by him as a justification for price increases.

Mr. Henderson's attitude is complicating Mr. Steelman's conciliation service efforts to avoid strikes, obviously employers are not going to enter Mr. Steelman's voluntary settlements calling for any wage increases until ordered by the War Labor Board, so they can increase prices.

Board Swamping Seen

So far in this war, the Conciliation service has handled 5,000 cases, of which only 300 tough ones have been sent up to the War Labor Board. Now the War Labor Board is likely to be swamped unless Henderson gives up the ghost.

The injustices, inanities and conflicts in both wage and price policies since the war began are obviously leading up to arbitrary freezing (as Bernard Baruch told them would be necessary from the start), and there seems some question now as to whether this inevitable consequence can successfully be delayed until after the elections November 3, for the sake of politics.

SERGEANT YORK IN REVERSE

Second Front Factors Are Too Grave For a Popular Decision, Sullivan Says

By MARK SULLIVAN

The net factors and viewpoints bearing on a second front is a shade on the side of no second front at the present moment. This status is subject to change at any instant. The viewpoints entering into the present status are those of the statesmen, advisers and military heads and experts of Britain and the United States. Those of Russia are, of course, consulted and kept in touch. But the position of the Russians, for obvious and understandable reasons, is that of urgent pleaders for a second front instantly, at any cost. It is the United States and Britain whose statesmen and military heads must preserve a spirit of judgment, balancing the reasons for an immediate second front, against the reasons for some delay.

Mark Sullivan

There is another viewpoint, which is ignored, or certainly ought to be. It is that of the peoples of England and the United States. No theory about democracy, or public opinion, can go so far as to assert that such a decision as this should be made by any group except military experts and statesmen. For this exclusion of popular opinion, there are many reasons. One is sufficient.

On this question, public opinion is not and cannot be well-informed. Factors involved are known only by the authorities, and cannot be revealed without giving information of the utmost value to the enemy. To push the argument for popular opinion to a concrete conclusion, imagine an announcement that a referendum on a second front would be held in the United States on a given date, and that the majority vote would be a mandate to President Roosevelt. The democratic process in this case would be useful to Hitler, disastrous to the Allies.

Communists Active

In England, the spearhead of popular agitation for an immediate second front is the Communists—they have a slogan, "Second front now". An Associated Press despatch from London describes the Communist party as engaged in organized pressure on the British government, by mass meetings, distribution of leaflets, calls by deputations on individual members of Parliament at their homes, and a post-card campaign addressed to Prime Minister Churchill.

That there will be a second front some time is fully accepted—that is the purpose of the troops and supplies we are sending to Northern Ireland and England. The question is when, whether now or later. The question has been up for some time. It is generally understood that the Americans have been slightly more favorable to immediate action than the British. As between statesmen and military leaders, it is probably safe to assume the statesmen are slightly more receptive to argument for immediate action. Military leaders, having a professional point of view, naturally prefer to wait, if possible, for perfect and complete preparation before action is taken.

It is a fateful decision to make. If the arguments on both sides are lined up and compared, there is a faint balance in favor of waiting a little.

The principal argument for immediate action is that Russia may be decisively beaten, perhaps put out of the war. Yet even if that tragedy should happen the war would not end. England would be still unconquered. And as Mr. Churchill said in one of his eloquent and penetrating speeches, so long as "this little island" remains intact, Hitler cannot bring his dream to fulfillment.

Possibility of Disaster

On the other hand, if an expeditionary force of British and Americans were sent to the continent now, with preparations still not complete, there is always possibility that the expedition might be defeated by the Germans. If defeated at all, it would be overwhelmed—the Germans would not be likely to permit another successful evacuation back to England, like the one at Dunkirk. Nor would Hitler now give Britain a breathing spell, as he did after Dunkirk. In short, the setting up of a second front too early, followed by defeat of the Allied invading force, might be followed by German invasion of England.

One suggestion is that a comparatively small invasion force be sent to the continent now, some 500,000 to a million men or so—leaving in England enough force to defend the island, should the expeditionary force to the continent be beaten. This raises the always delicate problem, how much is enough? Almost certainly, any small expeditionary force to the continent would be beaten—if the Germans chose to use enough force to beat it. This is admitted by those who favor a second front now. Their reply, mainly is, that the diversion by the Germans of enough troops to beat the expeditionary force, would so relieve the German pressure on the Russian front as to enable Russia to survive.

Only Small Force Practicable

Actually, a comparatively small expeditionary force now, with enough left in England to assure its safety, is the only thing practicable at this time. The Allies are obliged to consider whether there may be such a thing as too little and too soon. This condition is eased in proportion as more and more American troops arrive in Britain. But it is still short of the time when there will be a very large American force in Britain, enough to provide with the British a really formidable expeditionary force to the continent.

In terms of time, the critical period is described as "the next hundred days". This is sufficiently definite for slogan purposes, though short of the exact time. The critical period is from now until such time, in November or early December, as the Russian winter again takes a part in the war, as it did last year. If the Russian armies can be kept intact until winter, many conditions now acutely disturbing will be relieved.

A Late Election

From the Fairmont, W. Va., Times

When West Virginians go to the polls on August 4, they will take part in the latest election ever held in this state. The polls will open at 7:30 a. m. and will not close until 8:30 p. m.

This is all due to legislative action and the national adoption of wartime. The 1941 session of the legislature approved the addition of one hour to the voting day for elections in West Virginia. It was felt that the closing of the polls at 6:30 p. m. as in former years gave working people too little time to cast their votes in the evening. The new law provided that the polls should open at 6:30 a. m. and close at 7:30 p. m. Then came wartime and we all advanced our clocks one hour. But the election law reads that Eastern Standard time must be observed.

Thus, under wartime, Eastern Standard time is 7:30 a. m., not 6:30 and it is 8:30 p. m., not 7:30. We'll all have plenty of time to vote after dinner on August 4. We hope it won't work out that way—that most persons will wait until evening to vote—because the gathering of the returns to vote—because the gathering of the returns is going to be late enough as it is.

Broken Faith Is Peeve of Farley, Lawrence Says

By DAVID LAWRENCE

WASHINGTON, July 27—Back of the controversy that has arisen between two master politicians — Franklin Roosevelt and James A. Farley—over the selection of a Democratic nominee for the governorship of New York state is a story of alleged misunderstanding, alleged ingratitude and alleged faithlessness, all depending on which side or viewpoint is accepted as truth.

James A. Farley

Strangely enough in the code of modern politics, pledges or promises to the people either in campaign speeches or party platforms can be repudiated or ignored and the politician shrugs his shoulders and sighs either that conditions have changed or that public opinion forced a change. But let one politician give his word to another and fail to keep it and the unwritten rules of politics immediately fasten on the offender a charge of perfidy that is not readily forgiven.

The Farley side of the feud that exists today—and it is in no sense personal but political—is that Mr. Roosevelt sometime in February, 1940, was to have announced that he would not accept a third term nomination. Jim Farley is supposed to have had Mr. Roosevelt's personal word to that effect. Farley, moreover, allowed his own name to be entered in the presidential preference primaries in Massachusetts in April, 1940, relying on that pledge only to have administration henchmen attempt to take away that delegation from him.

Religious Objection Believed

The second charge is that Mr. Roosevelt in an interview with a reputable Washington correspondent, which was widely published early in 1940, deprecated the candidacy of Jim Farley who was being mentioned as a possible vice-presidential choice along with Cordell Hull, who was to lead the ticket. In that interview, which went undenied for more than two weeks, Mr. Roosevelt was quoted as having said something about Farley's membership in the Catholic church as a handicap to his candidacy. Reference was made to the attitude of the southern Democrats toward a Catholic nominee and, of course, in 1928 Al Smith, a Catholic, was knifed in the South in an unprecedented turnover.

Subsequently, the published interview insofar as it related to Farley was denied by the White House but to this day the former Democratic national chairman is reported by his friends as believing the president said it and that the denial was one of expediency only.

No Prejudices Seen

The Roosevelt side of the controversy is that no man who has occupied the high office of president in the last fifty years has been as free from race or religious prejudice as Franklin Roosevelt and that he has proved it on many occasions, beginning with his speech nominating Al Smith in 1928 and continuing through to his appointment of prominent Catholics to his cabinet and the supreme court, to say nothing of his bold move in establishing for the first time a presidential contact with the Vatican.

All this can be so and yet political gossip has always recognized the religious issue as it pertains to presidential nominations and Mr. Roosevelt may have been simply discussing a political condition rather than his own attitude. The rebuttal on this point from Mr. Farley's friends is that the president owed enough to Jim Farley to champion his cause and put an end to bigotry in politics and that the president had enough influence to overcome such alleged handicaps.

Matter of Conjecture

The Roosevelt side of the controversy about the pledge against a third term reportedly given to Farley is merely a matter of conjecture based on the way the president worded his famous statement to the Chicago convention in July, 1940. Mr. Roosevelt said he had intended all along not to accept a nomination but that world events caused him to search his conscience and come to the conclusion he should break the precedent.

It may well be that Mr. Roosevelt in February, 1940, was as convinced as he was in July, 1940, that he was indispensable to America's success in world affairs but Mr. Farley's complaint is that the president might at least have sent for him and in all candor told him of his change.

Peculiar Codes

So when Senator Mead for several months past has said he wasn't a candidate for governor and now enters the race as a draftee with the president's support, it is not surprising that Jim Farley's friends begin talking of what happened with the use of the "draft" technique in 1940 openly participated in by office holders beholden to the president for their appointments and influence.

Surely politics of the kind we are witnessing must be digging its own grave as thoughtful citizens ponder on the peculiar codes that are permitted to function in the interest of personal ambition.

CHAPTER THIRTY-EIGHT

CLAIRE TOOK out a white bathing outfit that consisted of brief shorts and a brief brassiere. "How do you like it?" she asked, holding up the two pieces.

"It's all right," said Dian; "what there is of it."

"It's the very latest thing."

"I can imagine. It's so late, it seems to me, it almost forgot to get here at all." Dian got out her own suit, which wasn't old-fashioned by any manner or means, but which, compared to Claire's, seemed like yards of material. "This will have to do for me," she said. "Imagine, it's got a skirt!"

"Oh, well," said Claire comfortingly, "lots of girls still like those tricky little things."

"Thanks, I'm glad to hear that," Dian said. "I'd hate to feel like my grandmother or something."

They heard Bill and Paul enter the adjoining room, and lowered their voices.

There was a knock on the dividing partition, and Paul spoke.

"We'll be ready in three shakes of a sheep's tail!" he said. "Don't be all day."

"We're almost ready now," Claire called back. "But don't get wet until after we reach the island," she added. "We don't want to get the boat all sloppy."

"Yes'm," said Paul.

"But I was counting on swimming to the island," said Bill.

"Silly!" said Claire. "You've got to help Paul row the boat.

"So it goes," said Paul. "Men must always labor."

"What do you mean, men must always labor?" Dian said. "I expect to spend half the day over a hot fire broiling wienies for you."

"Wienies?" said Claire. "Why, the chicken's already cooked and ready to eat. Who on earth wants to bother with wienies?"

"We so," said Dian. "Bill, Paul and I."

"We'll eat the chicken for lunch," said Paul, "and have the wienies for supper."

"The idea!" Claire said. "Mother and I slaving to fix a perfectly marvelous picnic hamper—and you bring along wienies."

"Oh, forget it," said Dian, for Claire's ears only. "If the men want wienies, let them have wienies. Why should you get all upset?"

Claire tried to think of something to say and couldn't. She finished getting into her bathing suit, piled her hair high upon her head and fastened it with a ribbon. Dian, watching her, reluctantly admitted that it would be difficult to find a more beautiful specimen of young womanhood. No wonder men could so easily shut their eyes to Claire's selfishness and fickleness! No wonder their eyes opened so wide with admiration when they beheld Claire as she looked!

"Like it on me?" Claire asked, seeing Dian's eyes upon her.

"Yes," said Dian. "You look like something out of a magazine cover."

Claire smiled, pleased. She waited until Dian was in her suit, and then said, "I like yours, too. It's really the type of thing that suits you to perfection."

"Meaning you don't think I should wear long skirts, long sleeves — stockings and laced-up shoes?"

"There you go again!" Claire said. "Being sarcastic. Come on, let's join the boys."

She caught up a bathing cap and went out. Dian followed her.

Bill and Paul were waiting for them. And, Dian thought, you couldn't find two better-looking men if you searched the world over, or two men with flatter tummies, broader shoulders and narrower hips. And tanned? Golden brown Paul—who was blond; and mahogany-colored Bill—who was brunet.

"Gosh!" said Claire softly.

"They are easy on the optics, aren't they?" said Dian.

"They simply take my breath!" Claire exclaimed.

"Then stop looking at them," Dian said. "You'll need your breath for swimming." She moved forward. "Greetings, gentlemen!" she said. "All set for the desert island epic?"

"All set!" said Bill. And he thought, "Sweet girl, Dian—like a slender ballet dancer in that cute skirt." He then looked at Claire and thought, "Venus DeMilo in a bathing suit!" He grinned and said, "It's a shame to take two lovely creatures like you girls to a desert island! We should be marching you along the boardwalk at Atlantic City."

"Cut the kidding, Bill," said Paul. "And help me with the boat. It's stuck."

"Right!" said Bill.

And presently the boat moved off—two pairs of oars dipping and rising.

The two girls sat in the stern. Dian gazed off toward the island, Claire gazed toward the men. Their smoothly working muscles fascinated her.

"How on earth could an artist get to be so strong?" she asked Bill.

He flushed a little. "Oh, I run around the Central Park reservoir three times a week," he said, joking. "Then, too, you can't imagine how many times I pick up tubes of paint and my brushes. That, you know, develops one."

"Idiot!" said Claire, laughing happily.

"And I got my strength," said Paul, "from opening cans in my West Indies kitchen." He looked at Claire and smiled. "But from now on I shall have to take up some other form of exercise, since you're going to use your mother's recipes, and feed me like a lord."

"That's what you think, my darling!" said Claire.

And Dian saw her when she once more turned admiring eyes upon Bill Rollins.

Although Dian had been dreading the day, and praying that it wouldn't be too long a one, she began to enjoy herself the moment she set foot upon the island. She loved the outdoors—sun and sky and water. It did things to her. It seemed to wash from her all feeling of malice and resentment, and emotions of that sort.

She bustled around helping get all their stuff settled.

"Why, I'd forgotten all about this old stone fireplace you boys built!" she said to Paul.

"So had I," said Paul. "Boy, what fun we had doing it. And now what fun it's going to be cooking those wienies in it."

Bill watched them. "Darned if I don't envy you your memories," he said. "It must have been fun being an Ardendale kid."

"It was," Paul said. "But I suppose all small-town kids are about the same."

"It wasn't, alas!" said Bill. "My folks never stayed put very long. I was always being dragged off here or there or the other place. The longest I ever stayed at one address was when I was in college."

"I should think that would have been exciting," Claire said. "I don't think being a small-town child is anything to boast about." She took a tablecloth from the picnic hamper her mother had prepared. "I used to envy people who didn't live in small towns."

"Yes, I remember," Dian said. "You used to go down to the depot every day you could manage it, to see the New York express go through."

"And wish you were sitting at one of the tables in the diner," said Paul.

Claire laughed. "I'll never forget the first time I went to New York," she said. "I nearly drove mother wild begging her to go into the diner and eat. And then I over-ate and got terribly sick."

Research Is Stimulated by Summer Incidence of Infantile Paralysis

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

Infantile paralysis is one of the few infectious diseases with a summer incidence, and this fact has stimulated a great many research workers to attempt to find a cause for it.

One theory which has considerable merit is that it is due to swimming or bathing in rivers, lakes or at the outlet of rivers in the ocean where contamination by sewage has occurred. In one report it was shown that out of 419 cases of infantile paralysis observed over a three-year period, 105 of the patients, slightly more than twenty-five per cent, had sum, waded or paddled in more or less contaminated waters just prior to the attack.

Another theory, less well supported by fact, also concerns swimming and suggests that undue cooling of the body may render it susceptible to infection with the virus of the disease.

Due to a Virus

There is no doubt that infantile paralysis is an infection due to a virus and probably enters the body through the nose; only in the nose, where the olfactory nerve spreads out, are nerves which go directly to the central nervous system exposed.

It is hard to believe that there is only one way for this infection to occur. It may come from droplet infection on food or from human contact. For instance, a case has been reported of four boys in a boys' school, all of whom came down the same day. No other cases developed in the school. Careful analysis was made of their daily habits and lives; they were not in close contact either in dormitories or in classrooms but they were all served at the table by a maid in whose home two cases of infantile paralysis later occurred. This looks like a pretty well proved case of a human carrier.

Under the heading of treatment, undoubtedly the most important advance has been the so-called Kenny treatment, the principle of which is to prevent contracture by early passive movement. At the University of Minnesota, where Nurse Kenny is now working, arrangements have been made to offer a course of this treatment to physicians, hospital nurses and physical therapy technicians.

It should be remembered that infantile paralysis is not a very contagious disease and that even in epidemic areas only a small number of people exposed take the disease.

For treatment in the acute stages, the use of convalescent serum is about the only thing that has any standing. Nobody would claim that is is anywhere like 100 per cent perfect, but it does no harm and should, in my opinion, be given a trial whenever possible and available.

An interesting observation that has not been followed up very closely in this country is that of a Swiss doctor, Contat, who in the 1937 epidemic prescribed potasium chlorate for the relief of the store throat accompanying the disease. He was greatly surprised at the favorable turn taken by the patient, as the temperature soon became normal and signs of meningeal irritation and paralysis disappeared. He followed this up by treating the next thirty-five cases with Potasium chlorate and in the whole series there was no fatality and little permanent paralysis.

Questions and Answers

M. L. W.: Please tell me what to do about a small lump the size of a pea on the back of the neck.

Answer: Consult a doctor and find out what it is. It is probably nothing more serious than a wen which can easily be removed.

M. B. D.: Please tell me what effect digitalis has on the heart. Does it strengthen the heart? Over how long a period could three grains of digitalis be taken without ill effect?

Answer: Digitalis is one of the best drugs to improve the output of the heart and the circulation. Three grains a day of the powdered leaf of digitalis cannot be taken very long without causing nausea. Those who are on a maintenance dose of digitalis usually leave off for one or two days at the end of the week. This prevents cumulated dosage and insures a more even action.

BUREAU IS ABOLISHED DAY AFTER LOCAL MAN IS NAMED DIRECTOR

BALTIMORE, July 27 (AP)—The Sun reported tonight that Michael F. Prendergast, Maryland newspaper man, was appointed state director of a federal bureau one day last month and the next day found his office had been abolished.

The Senate on June 30 confirmed the appointment of Prendergast as Maryland director of the Office of Government Reports, the Sun said, and at midnight the same day the OGR appropriations ran out.

Elmer Davis, national director of the newly created Office of War Information, ordered the office of government reports abolished the next day.

The Sun added that in strict fact, the OGR was actually cut down from sixty-one field offices to thirty-one, and those remaining were transferred to the new Office of War Information. There they form a division known as the Bureau of Public Inquiries, the Sun continued.

Prendergast, formerly a Baltimore and Cumberland newspaper man, found he was out of a job before he had the opportunity to function, the paper said. The Maryland OSR office was never set up.

When contacted last evening at his home, Michael F. Prendergast stated that the story as reported by the Baltimore Sun is true, and that he has been given assurance that the matter will be straightened out in five or six weeks.

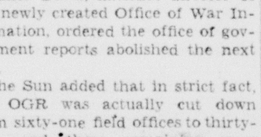

"Eight other directors' like myself, whose appointments were confirmed by the Senate, have received assurance that arrangements are being made to take care of us," Prendergast said.

Cod Liver Oil Often Is Cause Of Home Scenes

Mothers Can Train Children To Volunteer To Take Medicine

By GARRY C. MYERS, Ph. D.

"My doctor told me to give my baby cod liver oil once a day."

"Yes, my doctor gave the same advice to me about my girl of two, but she just won't take it."

One constantly hears mothers making these remarks. How absurd! I know of two boys, eight and 10, who quarrel over who is to get the largest spoonful of cod liver oil.

Parents who begin early with the infant meet no difficulty, except when they or some other member of the family offer bad suggestions.

Although it may seem more economical to buy cod liver oil by the gallon or quart, to do so is not practical. It may deteriorate and grow rancid. Better get it in small bottles and keep it fresh and cool. Any oil seems to you and me more distasteful when it is warm than when it is cool.

Over-eager mothers who do not keep in close touch with their physician may give the child more cod liver oil than necessary.

Administering Cod Liver Oil

Now suppose you have a child of two or three or older who needs cod liver oil, and who seriously objects to taking it. How shall you proceed? If you disguise it in orange juice of other necessary food you may succeed temporarily, only to make matters worse, to teach the child forever to dislike the food in which the cod liver oil has been disguised.

A better way may be to persuade the child to take it from a spoon, offering him only a few drops at first and increasing the amount gradually.

First offer it to the child under the most favorable conditions. If your inducement does not work and he refuses, cease your efforts, then remove it and say nothing. At a later time in the day have a good assistant available. Pour a small portion in the spoon, out of the child's sight; then as the assistant gently, but firmly, seizes the child and prevents its struggles, put it into him as skillfully and quickly as possible.

Incidentally, attract the child's attention to something he will respond to, but be sure not to give him a lecture on the value of cod liver oil or how he should do what you want him to do. Say nothing. Next time proceed in like manner, and continue in this fashion until he volunteers to take it alone. He will after several times, provided you are skillful, and go about it calmly.

A chart showing desirable hours of sleep for children may be had without cost by writing me at 235 East Forty-fifth street, New York city, enclosing a self-addressed envelope with a three-cent stamp on it.

Solving Parent Problem

Q. Should employed boys and girls pay board while living at home?

A. Certainly; and regardless of the income of their parents, for education in self-reliance and responsibility.

Q. My boys 10 and 12 object to washing dishes. They say it is sissy.

A. If their father considers washing dishes a manly job, and I hope he does, have no arguments with the boys about dishes. Let each take his turn, following the calendar, at this or any other job about the house. The experience will educate them to be good family citizens now and good husbands and fathers by and by.

Eric Knight Praises Joan Fontaine's Acting

"I think Joan Fontaine is immense. She's a great artist, because she has the feeling and innate sense to do things with that necessary rightness that can't be learned or simulated."

A prejudiced review?

No sir, that's author Eric Knight's reaction to the performance of Joan Fontaine in her starring role with Tyrone Power in "This Above All," the great new 20th Century-Fox hit now at the Strand theater. The film was produced by Darryl F. Zanuck and directed by Anatole Litvak.

Leslie Howard Collects Pipes as a Hobby

Did you know that Leslie Howard, star of the comedy melodrama, "Mister V," now running at the Liberty theater, is a champion pipe smoker? The celebrated star believes that there is a pipe for every mood and a mood for every pipe that's worth smoking at all. He owns one of the most interesting collections on earth and none of his 109 pipes is merely decorative.

His favorites are straight-stemmed briars with ample bowls. By his own admission, Howard is a man of many moods, induced, he believes, by a variety of interests. During production of "Mister V," which he produced, directed and starred in, Howard smoked a small briar. It disappeared only when he was actually under the Kliegs.

"Mister V" is being presented to screen audiences by Edward Small as a United Artists release.

Reginald Owen Has Role in "Mrs. Miniver"

Reginald Owen calls himself the "guinea pig of the make-up department." Few actors have worn so many and so varied disguises as the versatile Owen, to be found playing a deep-dyed villain in one picture then enacting a genial comedian in the next. His latest role is no exception. As Foley, aid raid warden and village storekeeper in M-G-M's "Mrs. Miniver," he wears a mustache and make-up which are distinctly Owenesque.

In Mrs. Miniver," now showing at the Maryland theater, which teams Greer Garson and Walter Pidgeon, he has a whimsical role; a storekeeper who sells anything from air raid shelters to sardines to the English village near London in which the picture's action takes place.

Make-up, Owen insists, is a very valauble aid in acting, but he adds that make-up alone does more harm than good. "It's not possible for make-up to be of any help unless the actor has first given his character a thorough sttudy," says Owen.

"The weird make-up I used in 'Trouble for Two,' which was taken from Robert Louis Stevenson's 'Suicide Club,' was different. It went into the realm of fantasy. Stevenson had written a fantastic character. There was not much to go on in studying such a character but the original stary. In that case we thought up an imaginary character — then gave him an imaginary make-up to match. Scrooge in 'A Christmas Carol,' closely copied the Cruikshank drawings, which are inseparable from Dickens's stories. We followed the original story, even to dialogue, almost to the letter."

Virginia Gilmore Refuses Hair Dye

Virginia Gilmore would not dye her hair black for her role in 20th Century-Fox's "Swamp Water," the picturization of Vereen Bell's best selling novel now at the Garden theater.

The character of Mabel McKenzie, to which the blonde Virginia had been assigned, called for a black-haired girl. But she would not let the make-up department touch her hair.

"I wouldn't dye my hair black for anything," said Virginia. "It's a natural blonde, and I want to keep it that way. Besides, if I dyed it, people would say that I was copying Hedy Lamarr or Joan Bennett, and I don't want to be called a copycat."

The studio agreed with her, so she will be a blonde "Mabel McKenzie."

Walter Brennan, Walter Huston, Anne Baxter and Dana Andrews head the featured cast of "Swamp Water."

Glenn Ford Stars In "Martin Eden" Role

Jack London, one of America's greatest writers, always regarded "Martin Eden" as his greatest novel. Hard-hitting preachment against social injustice, the lusty novel was packed with adventure of the type which first made the name of London famous; it was, moreover, based upon incidents in his own adventure-crammed life.

In bringing "Martin Eden" to the screen, Columbia consulted with Charmain London, the writer's 70-year-old widow, in her ranch in the famous Valley of the Moon, setting for one of London's more idyllic romances. As a result, "Adventures of Martin Eden," now at the Embassy theater with Glenn Ford, Claire Trevor, Evelyn Keyes and Stuart Erwin, is said to be virtually a literal picturization not only of London himself, but of the human character he created and the hot-blooded life he lived.

Born in San Francisco in 1876, London's road to fame was, perhaps, the most painful ever traversed by any author in history. He once said he couldn't remember when he wasn't burdened with responsibilities. A ranch boy at eight, his schooling was fragmentary in nature, but he was an omnivorous reader. He was an "opster-pirate," shipped as a seaman before the mast, was a salmon fisherman, a seal-hunter, a coal shoveler, a longshoreman.

FAMOUS DERBY

Charlie Chaplin in "The Gold Rush." The comedian's famous derby, cane and baggy pants were assembled for second film which is your laugh cue for '42, opening soon at the Maryland theater.

Inland Steel Co. Plans Court Test Of Union Security

CHICAGO, July 27 (AP) — Inland Steel Company has completed "Little Steel's" acceptance of the recent War Labor Board order for union security and pay increases but said it "reserved the right" to test the union security provision in the courts.

Asserting its acceptance was compelled by "threat of confiscation" by the War Labor Board and by a threatened strike of the CIO United Steelworkers of America, the company said:

"In the name of patriotism, Inland is compelled to do a thing which it believes to be wrong, because the alternative would interfere with war production."

TODAY'S VICTORY GARDEN-GRAPH

By DEAN HALLIDAY

DELUXE GRAPES

Contrary to an old belief, grapevines should be pruned in the summer; it has been proven that pruning at such time is detrimental to the vines. Grapes, if overfed with plant food, are likely to run to vine and foliage rather than fruit. For this reason grapes should not be grown in soil only rich in nitrogenous matter.

If you would have de luxe grapes for table use, resort to "bagging" them, as shown in the Garden-Graph. Covering each full bunch of grapes with a paper bag, tied at the top, will protect the fruit from birds and insects and permit it to develop into full size without a blemish.

Paper bags will serve for this purpose. The bags should be tied securely and the bottom corners snipped off to allow any rain water that may seep into the bag to drain away.

Grafton Woman Is Fatally Injured In Collision

J. J. Miller Is Seriously Injured When Motorcycle Crashes against Truck

KEYSER, W. Va., July 27—A collision between a motorcycle and a coal truck at 12:30 o'clock this afternoon on Route 50 about ten miles west of Keyser, W. Va., resulted in the death of Mrs. Joseph James Miller of Grafton, W. Va., and the serious injury of her husband who was driving the motorcycle.

Mr. and Mrs. William, according to state police who investigated, were enroute to Washington, D. C., where Mr. Miller is employed, when their motorcycle while rounding a sharp curve on Allegany mountain collided with a coal truck driven by Karl K. Hite, of Woodstock, Va.

Police said Mrs. Miller died on the way to the hospital and described Mr. Miller's injuries as serious. He was admitted to Potomac Valley hospital where attaches said he was resting comfortably this evening.

Trooper W. L. White, one of the investigating officers, said a inquest held last evening had been continued pending the outcome of Mr. Miller's injuries. He said Hite was not being held.

Hite told officers he was operating a coal truck for his mother, Mrs. George Miller, Woodstock, Va., who operates a transit company.

Officers said the motorcycle was demolished and the truck badly damaged.

Trooper R. R. Karrikoff, also aided in the investigation.

Ursuline Sisters Are Given Purse In Frostburg

Gifts Are from Members of Parish and Friends of the Nuns

FROSTBURG, July 27.—The Sisters of the Ursuline Convent, who will leave Frostburg this week after the order to which they belong served as instructors in St. Michael's parochial school since 1904, were presented with a purse of $785, Sunday afternoon, representing gifts in varying amounts from members of St. Michael's parish and business concerns of the community.

The presentation was made at a special ceremony held at 5 p. m., in the convent, with the Rev. Patrick J. Bradley, pastor of St. Michael's church, making the presentation address in the presence of the entire staff of Sisters, the Rev. Dominic A. Bonomo, assistant pastor and representatives of various organizations of the church.

At the conclusion of the ceremony, Benediction of the Most Blessed Sacrament was given by Father Bradley. Members of the Holy Name choir sang benediction hymns closing with "Holy God We Praise Thy Name." Miss Glenrose Porter played the organ accompaniments.

In addition to the purse presented by Father Bradley on behalf of the alumni association of St. Michael's school, other gifts presented to the Sisters brought the total to well over $900.

An attractive program, ornamented with a sketch of St. Michael's church and parochial school, was distributed. The program in the form of a folder contained the name of each individual who presented a gift, a poem, entitled "God Bless You," by St. Michael's Altar Boys, the names of the solicitors, alumni officers, a farewell poem and an "Appreciation" from the Alumni Association in which they asked the Sisters to accept the purse as a token of gratitude from their priests, their friends and admirers, both Catholic and non-Catholic and expressed the hope that the purse might in some small way compensate them for their labor and sacrifices in the work in St. Michael's parish.

HARD WORK, ELIXIR

The real elixir of life, according to 80-year-old Judge Charles Williams, above, of Chicago's Superior court, is hard work. Flouting the statement of famed Dr. Morris Fishbein that the "hardest workers live the shortest time," Judge Williams says a man really learns how to work at the age of 40 and is good until 80 if he keeps in trim working hard.

Rockwood Woman Shoots Her Son

Mrs. Emmet Sullivan Practices in Yard, Then Wounds Child

ROCKWOOD, Pa., July 27 (AP)—Chief Detective Harry C. Jacobs reported tonight Mrs. Emmet Sullivan, 30, shot and seriously wounded her seven-year-old son, Emmet, Jr., today and then kept a vigil at the boy's bedside.

The boy was taken to Somerset community hospital, where attaches described his condition as "very serious." He was shot through the lung.

The shooting occurred at Rockwood community, a mining community about a mile and a half north of Rockwood.

Jacobs said Mrs. Sullivan fired several practice shots in the yard of her home and that upon returning to the house she told her boy "I'm going to shoot you." Then Jacobs reported she sent a .22 caliber bullet through the youngster's lung.

Margaret, eight-year-old sister of the boy, rushed from the house to summon police.

Jacobs said no charges had been placed against the woman pending the outcome of the boy's condition and a further investigation of the case.

Corn and Wheat Are Beaten Down; Plants Uprooted

Unpaved Roads Are Washed Out Making Travel Impossible

MT. SAVAGE, July 27—A heavy rainstorm in this area this afternoon caused much damage to Victory gardens, planted here this spring. In the hilly sections the rain washed through the gardens, uprooting many of the plants and ploughing large ditches through the planted areas.

Corn and wheat were beaten to the ground by the force of the rain. On Main street the water was even with the curb and after the storm layers of mud remained on the highway. Many of the unpaved roads were washed out so badly that it is impossible to travel on them.

Nelson Wins Tam o'Shanter Golf Tourney

Defending Champ Defeats Heafner In Title Playoff

Check for $2,500 Swells Texan's Season Earnings to $9,601

By CHARLES CHAMBERLAIN

CHICAGO, July 27 (AP)—The Tam O'Shanter money scramble, better known as the $15,000 golf open, came to an end today like a fantastic nightmare with Byron Nelson the winner.

Nelson successfully defended his title by crushing Clayton Heafner, the man-mountain pro of Linville, N. C., with a sub-par 67—ten strokes below his yesterday's round which sent him against Heafner in the eighteen hole playoff.

Nelson, the Texan who works out of Toledo, O., posted a 33-34 to his opponent's 34-37 to maintain his record of never losing a playoff for a major golf championship. Heafner, recent winner of the Mahoning Valley open at Girard, O., had never before gone an extra heat.

A $2,500 check went to Nelson, swelling his season's official earnings to $9,601 which surpassed those of Sam Snead and left the Toledo pro second to Ben Hogan in the money chase. The figures, announced by Fred Corcoran, P. G. A. tournament manager, listed Hogan at $11,993 and Snead at $8,078.

2,000 Customers on Hand

It was the thirty-ninth successive tournament that Nelson had finished in the money, compared with Hogan's all-time record of fifty-six straight cash finishes.

Upward of 2,000 customers, the last group in a week filled with the largest galleries in the game's history, lagged after the match today in unpleasant weather conditions. Perhaps they thought they could get another chance to watch Nelson try for a great money putt on the eighteenth green.

But Nelson had the championship and its cash sewed up before reaching the eighteenth today. And in the meantime he had given the crowd another three holes of hot shooting.

On the fourth, fifth and sixth holes he dropped four strokes to par with a pair of birdies and an eagle. He rammed in a twelve footer and a ten footer for the birds and holed a fifteen foot chip shot for an eagle two on the 275-yard fifth.

Match Closely Contested

The match was so closely-contested at times that birdies halved three holes, but was so long at other points that pars were good for strokes on six holes. Heafner had four bogies and Nelson two, one on the first hole which gave Heafner his only advantage of the day.

Thus ended a week of some of the goofiest golf on record—Nelson's being just as goofy as the next guy's. For didn't the great one shoot the tournament's lowest score of 65 to tie the course record—and then on the next day soar to 77, one of the highest scores among the big shot pros? The cards follow:

Par out	453	444	435—36
Nelson out	553	323	435—33
Heafner out	463	433	434—34
Par in	534	445	344-36—72
Nelson in	434	344	334-34—67
Heafner in	435	454	345-37—71

New Cage Order Comes to Chile

Ex-Stanford Captain Makes Hit Teaching Game in So. America

SANTIAGO, Chile, July 27 (Wide World)—Ken Davidson, Stanford basketball captain of two years ago, is running across some strange things while teaching basketball at Catholic university.

When Davidson first came here he discovered they played the game with balls of various sizes and shapes, the nearest thing to standard being two-thirds the size of the American regulation, with soccer seams all around it.

Players had no knowledge of blocks, screens, organized offense or defense, shooting or pivoting.

Under Davidson the Chilean boys are learning fast and the government has asked him to remain six more months to establish a library of basketball from which the material could later be copied and sent to all parts of the country.

He also has been asked to coach a team of the best boys from all parts of Chile for competition in the South American games.

Chileans consider him the greatest basketball player they have ever seen.

Van Lingle Mungo Will Look Queer In Baseball Uniform He Once Hated

By JOHN LARDNER

NEW YORK, July 28—It was back in 1934 that William Harold Terry, the chilly man from Memphis, asked his cynical and celebrated question "is Brooklyn still in the league?" The Dodgers, though humble in those days and every inch a team of bums, were nonetheless allergic to scornful remarks from men from Memphis, and later in the year they knocked Mr. Terry and his haughty New York Giants clean out of the pennant race.

You may have forgotten, but the Dodger most instrumental in this deed of vengeance was Van Lingle Mungo, a large and belligerent South Carolina land-owner who threw the ball with great speed. In the first game of a crucial series in September, Mr. Mungo mowed down the Giants with his pitching arm and insulted them further by flailing their pitchers with his bat.

The Giants never did recover from ministrations of Mr. Mungo. Leaking prestige from every seam, they dropped out of the pennant race, which was won by the Gashouse Gang in St. Louis, going away.

Time a Great Healer

Needless to say, Mr. Mungo made himself many a bitter foe in the Giant garrison that year, and in the seasons that followed he did his best to keep the wound open, being at all times a gentleman opposed to peace and concord and highly partial to a punch in the nose, given or received. But time is a great healer, as Shakespeare used to tell me over the hot scones and beer. The fortunes of the Giants have ebbed. So has their pride. Carefully swallowing same, they went into the open market this week and acquired, from Minnlapolis, for cash, the vibrant carcass of Polo Grounds public enemy No. 1, to-wit, Van Lingle Mungo.

The thought of Mungo pitching for the Giants is very hard to take on an empty stomach, but what can you do about it? Times change. To use a Latin allusion which happens to be unengaged at the moment, more mutantur. Also, quien sabe? Also, ca y est. Also, what the hell?

When Mr. Mungo was sold to Minneapolis by the now lordly Dodgers, he pronounced himself to be in great fear for his life.

"It won't work in that blank blank country of ice and snow," said the large but sentitive South Carolinian. "I would freeze to death. I ain't used to the cold. Either they sell me to the blank blank blank Atlanta club," or I won't play."

Mr. Mungo had worked the previous season in Montreal, which he seemed to consider just a hop, skip, and jump from the Mason-Dixon line. If you don't agree with Mungo's executive view of geography, remember that people felt the same way about Columbus when he stated that the world was round. One man's guess is as good as another's, and Mr. Mungo obviously disliked the idea of eating whale meat for a whole summer in Minneapolis and dodging glaciers on his way to work.

Record Ten and Three

Eventually he surrendered, and up to date this year, in the glow of the aurora borealis, with blizzards howling in his ears, he has won ten games while losing three. This was the record which persuaded the Giants to swallow their pride. After thawing Mr. Mungo out, they will put him to work in the despicable uniform of his ancient enemies.

On the same ball club with Mr. Mungo will be rowdy Richard Bartell, whose ears used to be the target for some of Mr. Mungo's most enthusiastic pitches. Once, after ducking a couple of beanballs, Mr. Bartell dragged a bunt near first base on which Mungo covered the bag, and the boys began to punch the moment they came within range of each other. That is the sort of sentimental memory that Mr. Mungo will bring to his new comrades.

The National League, of course, has changed greatly in eight years, the Brooklyn Dodgers are the peerage now, and the Giants are humble climbers. It would be dramatically proper for Mungo to beat the Dodgers out of the pennant, and no doubt he will do so as soon as Leo Durocher, the Brooklyn manager, says "the Giants? Are they still in the league?" Mr. Durocher should be saying those words any day now. He has said practically everything else. — North American Newspaper Alliance.

Detroit Pitcher Rejected in Draft

DETROIT, July 27 (AP)—Hal Newhouser, the Detroit Tigers' twenty-one-year-old southpaw pitcher, was rejected for army service by examining physicians today when he reported for induction. The physicians declined to disclose the grounds on which Newhouser failed to pass the physical tests.

Newhouser, graduate of Detroit sandlots, has a record of four victories and eight defeats this season. He was a member of the American League All-Star squad. He registered for Selective Service last fall when youths twenty years old were enrolled. He was twenty-one last May 20.

Frostburg Trojans Snap Losing Streak

Red Sox Defeat Cleveland 8 to 5 With Late Rally

Hughson Notches Eleventh Victory--Cronin Takes Over Cleanup Spot

CLEVELAND, July 27 (AP)—The Boston Red Sox clung to second place in the American League today, tallying four runs in the last two innings to turn back the threatening Cleveland Indians 8 to 5 in the opener of a four-game series.

Tex Hughson notched his eleventh victory against three defeats, but was clubbed for twelve hits while Boston collected eleven—nine off loser Al Milnar and two off Joe Heving.

In an effort to halt the Red Sox slump that has lost them fifteen of their last twenty-four games, Manager Joe Cronin took over the cleanup spot in the batting order and moved Ted Williams into the number three position. Cronin went in at third base, later relinquishing the job to Jim Tabor.

The Red Sox got to Milnar for two runs in the first inning, filling the bases with none out on a single and two walks and scoring on two fly balls. The Indians came back in the third, tallying three runs on doubles by Manager Lou Boudreau and Ken Keltner and a triple by Jeff Heath in succession, and later a single by Ray Mack.

The Indians scored again in the fourth on hits by Roy Weatherly and Keltner, and Boston tied it up with a run in each of the fifth and sixth innings. Another tally in the eighth put the Red Sox out in front, and they clinched the game in the ninth with three runs as Heving

U. of Md. ROTC Cadets To Open Grid Training

Captain George Bohler, Veteran Coach, Will Direct Program

COLLEGE PARK, Md., July 27 (AP)—More than 600 University of Maryland ROTC cadets this week will begin a three-week football training program under Captain George M. Bohler, the new ROTC physical training director and noted collegiate coach.

The training period will be followed by a series of inter-company games that will continue until the fall training period for varsity and freshman football teams opens.

Bohler, a veteran football, basketball and baseball coach, was transferred here from Jackson Barracks, New Orleans, where he was athletic director.

He said the cadets would practice one hour a day, five days a week and that part of that period would be voluntary.

"Football," Captain Bohler said, "is the best training proposition for physical development of soldiers because it develops all phases of physical fitness including staying ability, cooperation and teamwork and muscular coordination.

At the conclusion of the football program, extensive programs in other sports—basketball and boxing among them—will follow.

Col. Robert E. Eysor, Jr., head of the university military department, said that a boxing tournament was planned for early November in which three quarters of the entire ROTC enrollment was expected to participate.

Captain Bohler has had an active athletic career spanning sixteen years followed by years of successful coaching experience.

A native of Reading, Pa., the 51-year-old captain broke into professional baseball with the Oakland, Cal., team in the Pacific Coast League at 16. He quickly went up to the Detroit Tigers and spent several seasons there as a pitcher.

After five years in professional baseball, he entered Washington State college and in his senior year played in the first Rose bowl game.

From Washington State, Bohler went to war and spent two years over seas with the American Army of Occupation.

He returned to coach basketball, baseball and football at the University of Oregon. One of his proteges there was Eddie Reinhart, now director of athletics at George Washington university, Washington, D. C.

Through the period 1923-32 inclusive, he was head coach at Mississippi college and there met in rivalry Maryland's athletic director, Clark Shaughnessy, then football coach at Tulane.

Bohler's next hop was to the University of Mississippi where he coached for seven years. In 1939 he moved to Princeton, as head trainer of the football team and in 1940 he was back in the army again.

Bohler is one of the old timers who does not long for the "good old days." In his opinion sports today are better than they ever have been.

But what Bohler likes to remember as his greatest teams were not football or baseball. They were basketball teams he produced at Ole Miss during the years 1936-38 inclusive. Those teams won eighty-five per cent of their games in hot competition.

The Morning Line

"The Morning Line," in case you are not a race track follower, is what an expert figures in advance the prices or odds will be when the race is run. I said "will be," not "should be." There's a big difference as Frank Shannon, the crack Morning Liner, will tell you.

Some sixty odd years ago Frank Shannon was born in Gallatin, Tenn., only a few miles from my native habitat at Murfreesboro. From the heart of Tennessee's bluegrass belt Frank lost little time in learning how to figure racing odds, and then let the other fellow try to pick the winners.

With more than forty years' experience in this game, Mr. Shannon has now developed his "Morning Line," which you get at all New York tracks, into a combined art and science that has never been equalled. If Frank Shannon says a horse will close at 8 to 5, said horse may open at 15 to 1 but he will close at 8 to 5 just the same.

The Gallatin Judge rarely misses by even a fraction.

Art of "Morning Lining"

"Arranging the Morning Line takes quite a lot of figuring," the expert said. "It works in just about this order—

"1. The class of the horse, including past performances.

"2. The jockey riding same.

"3. Weight to be carried.

"4. Condition of the track—fast or heavy.

"5. Ownership—whether or not its a betting stable.

"This last is often an important factor. Certain owners like to back their horses more heavily than others do, and this must be given consideration.

Quite a Difference

"I've had a lot of people criticize me for rating a horse as favorite at 8 to 5 or 6 to 5 when he may run fourth or fifth. These people don't quite understand what the Morning Line is.

I've picked a horse to close at 6 to 5 when I wouldn't back him at 3 to 1. I'm not responsible for favorites the public and the owners make. It's my job to tell what the odds will be, not what they ought to be."

Mr. Shannon has a pained look when the closing odds differ to any material extent from the ones he has put upon the board. He takes any real shift as a personal offense. But there are not many such shifts after expert Shannon has digested all available statistics, including the mysterious workings of the public mind.

Two Rookie Managers

It is about time to chuck a brace of late summer floral arrangements in the general direction of Mel Ott and Lou Boudreau.

These two rookie managers drew considerable applause last March in Florida for the way they handled things. Both were keen, alert, hard-working hustlers on the job.

But cheers that bloom in early spring are often likely to pick up a Bronx tinge by early August. It is a long way in baseball from March to August.

As Leo Diegel once said, "The longest walk in golf is from the practice tee to the first tee in a tournament."

Both Ott and Boudreau have been under baseball fire for over three months now. And both have come along with their share of wild laurel blossoms.

Higher Up

Mel and Lou or Ott and Boudreau have the Giants and Indians higher up than they figured to be when the season opened. Both have caught and kept the complete respect of their teams.

Neither ball club rated with the two leaders—Dodgers and Yankees. The Giants were picked around fifth or sixth place with so much pitching uncertainty. The Indians were given only a chance for the bottom of the first division, with Bob Feller missing.

But the Indians have been stalking second place and the Giants third place for some time.

We have always noticed that after any praise or any cheers the recipient usually takes it under either the right or left ear, thereby making a simian wonder out of the cheerleader. But so far, at least, the two rookie leaders have more than delivered their share of the right stuff.

Nine Midwestern Gridmen To Start In Charity Game

College All-Stars Will Oppose Bears at Chicago Aug. 28

CHICAGO, July 27 (AP)—Midwestern players were chosen today to fill nine of the eleven starting positions in the collegiate all-star football lineup that will oppose the Chicago Bears, national pro champions, in Soldier field, Chicago, Aug. 28.

The two exceptions were Mal Kutner, Texas end, and Al Biozis, Georgetown tackle.

The Chicago Tribune Sponsor of the ninth annual charity game, announced the choices were made by 4,928,083 fans who voted in a poll conducted by it and 200 associated newspapers and radio stations in thirty-eight states and the District of Columbia. The eleven top choices were:

End, Mal Kutner, Texas.
Tackle, James Daniel, Ohio State.
Guard, Bernie Crimmins, Notre Dame.
Center, Vincent Banonis, Detroit.
Guard, Bob Jeffries, Missouri.
Tackle, Al Biozis, Georgetown.
End, Charles Ringer, Minnesota.
Quarterback, Dick Erdlitz, Northwestern.
Halfback, Bruce Smith, Minnesota.
Halfback Steve Juzwik, Notre Dame.
Fullback, Jack Graf, Ohio State.

The all-star coaching staff, to be announced, must start this lineup unless a player is unable to accept election or is physically unfit the night of the game. In that event the man next in line in the voting must be advanced to the vacancy at the kickoff.

In addition to the starters, the Tribune invited sixty-four players to round out the squad.

Thirty-four universities and colleges were represented.

The sixty-four others invited included John Rokisky, Duquesne end; Al Demao, Duquesne center; Bill Dudley, Virginia, and Jack Hunt, Marshall, both halfbacks.

War Is Having Little Effect On Loop Races

Indians, Who Lost Feller, Can Fashion Closest Thing to an Alibi

By WHITNEY MARTIN

NEW YORK, July 27 (Wide World) — The major league pennant races this year were supposed to be decided by the war, which is a funny name for the Yankees and Dodgers. Those two clubs have been doing all the deciding necessary, without any outside help.

As a matter of fact, the war has been a little lax in its influence on the campaigns. Before the season started it was expected that by now the draft would have nibbled away at the clubs until the team with nine men left would win a pennant, and the luck of the draw might make even the Phils contenders.

Nothing like that has happened, and the standings of the real contenders today are about as they would be if the war hadn't come along to sprinkle question marks all over the place. In other words, the players who were counted on still are around, and a club that doesn't win can't say it was because its A-1 players were 1-A.

Tribe Points to Feller

The closest to an alibi might be fashioned by the Cleveland Indians, who could point to their twelve game or so deficit and say that Bob Feller would have had those games in his hip pocket by now. Other American League clubs have lost valuable players, but they didn't figure to be contenders even with those men available.

In the National League you have to go a little farther back to nose out an alibi. Back to the minors, in fact, as it is through loss of minor league players who were counted on to fill gaps that the clubs have suffered most. And you're going pretty far back when you have to base your pennant chances on minor leaguers who might prove about as valuable as a bat boy. It's too much like missing a train and blaming it on the fact someone took the egg you hoped would hatch the rooster you counted on to wake you up.

The Cardinals, for instance, counted on Fred Martin, from Houston, and Johnny Grodzicki, of Columbus, to add class to their mound staff. Neither was available. Both were gambles, however, The Cardinal loss which really hurt was their own darned fault. They sold John Mize to the Giants.

Pittsburgh was not considered a serious contender, but the Pirates had a fellow coming up on whom they were counting heavily. Just a rookie, but you'd have thought they were bringing up their own umpire. The lad's name is Bill Fox, from Harrisburg, and the Bucs disposed of Arky Vaughan on the strength of the rookie's promise. The service got him and the club was stuck.

Wait until Next Year

The Brooklyn lineup appears due to remain intact. The Dodgers lost Cookie Lavagetto, but they didn't lose anything in getting Arky Vaughan to fill the spot. Likewise the Cincinnati Reds haven't lost anyone who figured to make the big difference in the pennant chances.

So all in all, the clubs can't blame their failures on the inroads of the war. The races are being run without outside interference, and even injuries haven't had much to do with the National League scramble, as they did last year.

This year if the Dodgers win — putting the "if" in just to mollify any die-hards — they'll do it because they are the better team. Last year there were doubts in some quarters, including this two-bits, as the Cards were as unlucky as a day at the races. There have been various and sundry injuries this year on one club or another, but nothing serious. No big bones broken, as Pepper Martin would say.

But wait until next year. That's when the absence of the young fellows who would have been getting their seasoning this year will be felt.

Offense or Defense, That Gordon Gent Does a Job

Here, at peak of its power, is the swing which may bring Yankee second sacker the American League batting crown.

To complete a double play Joe coolly ignores the on-charging runner, touches second and pegs to first.

Baseball Clubs Starting To Feel Player Shortage

Reds Pay More than Actual Value for Frank Kelleher, Eric Tipton

By JUDSON BAILEY

NEW YORK, July 27 (AP)—Baseball clubs are beginning to feel the crimp of a player shortage. . . . Several of the big league clubs are under the player limit and the Cincinnati Reds say they had to pay a good bit more than actual value to pick up Frank Kelleher and Eric Tipton from the Yankee system last week. . . . Kelleher hasn't made a hit in the four games he has been used, but Tipton has been coming through for the Redlegs. . . . One reason the Giants bought Van Mungo was because they expect Pitcher Bob Carpenter to be called in the draft within a few weeks.

After Frank Frisch was ejected from the ball game the night the Pirates left Pittsburgh he threw one of his baseball shoes behind his desk, so he is making the Eastern swing wearing one shoe of his own and one borrowed from Outfielder Ed Stewart. . . . The Yanks are playing in Chicago, but Bill Dickey, their ailing catcher, stayed behind in New York and Pitcher Marius Russo, who has started only one game this year, was left in Detroit. . . . Some of the critics have found technical flaws in "Pride of the Yankees" but to this casual moviegoer it was a fascinating picture and very much like the real Lou Gehrig.

Mort Cooper hasn't pitched for eight days and Manager Billy Southworth says he is ready for the Dodger series. . . . Says he very likely would have held him out of the Phils and Braves series even if the ace righthander hadn't been hurt. . . . The Washington Senators have been angling for Utility Infielder Oscar Grimes of the Cleveland Indians. . . . The Brooklyn Dodgers, who have stolen home five times, have got the other clubs in the National League doing it. . . . The other day Dom Dallessandro of the Chicago Cubs was told to try it, bluffing on the first pitch and then going the whole way on the second. . . . Dallessandro, who never had stolen home before, took such a big lead when he was supposed to be bluffing that he just kept going and scored. . . . Hot Springs, Ark., is making a strong bid to become the spring training base of the Philadelphia Athletics. . . . The Pittsburgh Pirates may be the next club to announce it is not returning to the coast.

Jimmy Ripple is trying to reduce since joining the Toronto Maple Leafs. . . . Babe Young has done so well as the Giants' centerfielder that Buster Maynard has decided to try out at third base. . . . The St. Louis Cardinals are still hoping that Estel Crabtree, who was given his free agency by Judge Landis last month, will decide to return to them.

Jaycee Golfers Bow at Oakland

OAKLAND, July 27—Cumberland Junior Association of Commerce golfers suffered a 10½ to 7½ setback at the hands of Oakland Jaycee linksmen yesterday on the local course.

Cumberland's No. 1 combination, Carroll Boggs and C. S. Catherman, Jr., defeated Dr. R. R. Williams and P. D. Bittle in the feature match. Boggs had a two-under-par 67, Catherman a 73, Dr. Williams a 76 and Bittle a 75.

John Schaidt scored Cumberland's other victory with a 3-0 decision over C. Briner, carding a 102 to his foe's 113. Ken Gerard with 85 and George Young with 84 finished on even terms with Oakland's B. Gondon and W. Hinebaugh.

In other matches, Joe Stevenson and G. Stemple, Oakland, defeated Dan Roby and Art Kamens; J. Eckard and "Bud" Lohr, Oakland, won over Glenn Zembower and Jack Wilkinson and V. Kelley and M. Miller, Oakland, turned back Dave Kauffman and Paul Stakem.

Chicago Coach Sees Revival of Soccer

OAK PARK, Ill., (Wide World)—Take a coach's word for it, soccer after this war will rival football and baseball in popularity and do much to promote Pan-American friendship and solidarity.

The coach is John William Wood, who learned his soccer as an English youth before coming to America in 1907. He now coaches the Oak Park high school team.

"Soccer is particularly popular in Mexico and South America," he said. "In Mexico the sport has replaced bull-fighting as the national pastime and good players south of the Rio Grande are valued as much as $100,000. Crowds average 30,000. Uruguay, Chile, and other South American countries have gone for the game in a big way."

Wood's high school team has won eleven consecutive state championships. He also tutors the Oak Park Acorns, an independent team. "Soccer is the national pastime in sixty-nine countries," he continued. "Soccer is enjoying a wave of popularity in this country and it is growing every day. I don't say it will ever replace football or baseball but I do say it may become one of the big sports of this country."

Saratoga Opens Wartime Meeting

Scotland Light and Breezing Home Win Features before 5,158 Fans

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N. Y., July 27 (AP) — Venerable Saratoga Springs opened its fourth period of wartime racing today with Thomas M. Howell's Scotland Light annexing the American Legion handicap and William Ziegler, Jr.'s Breezing Home triumphing in the sixty-eighth running of the Flash stakes.

Located far from the densely populated areas of metropolitan New York, the track still lured 5,158 spectators today in spite of gas and tire shortages and weather conditions that were far from ideal.

Saratoga's sidewalks, some of them reminders of the park's 1864 opening, took a terrific pounding. Taxis, regular-run buses, horse-drawn vehicles, good old shoe leather and even bicycles were used as means of transportation.

In taking the Flash, Breezing Home set the pace all the way and finished the five and a half furlongs for juveniles a length in front of W. E. Boeing's Devil's Thumb. The Christiana stable's Quillon was another half length in the rear.

NEW YORK, July 27 (AP)—William Woodward's thoroughbreds, including Apache, which won both the Empire City and Yonkers handicap, were the leading money winners at the Empire City meeting, which closed Saturday, with a total of $32,550. Apache's triumphs were worth $20,100 and $8,150, respectively.

A. J. Sackett, whose Tola Rose was the surprise winner of the Butler, finished second with $23,300, while third place went to Warren Wright's Calumet farm, with $10,150.

DAILY DOUBLE PAYS $1,381.30 AT BEL AIR

BEL AIR, Md., July 27 (AP)—A daily double of $1,381.30 for $2 stole some of the thunder from the featured Kingsville purse today as racing was conducted before a crowd of 5,000, with the track in heavy condition.

Vale Victory, paying $31.50, scored in the first race and Certain Party, with $66.40 as the payoff, won the second to account for the big double.

The Kingsville, over the six and a half furlong distance, saw Hard Telling, long shot victor here last week, repeat that triumph with Johnny Harrell in the saddle.

Carrying the silks of Mrs. M. S. Bach, Hard Telling had the speed to outrun her rivals from beginning to end, but at the wire she was only a neck in front of W. M. Beougher's Royal Echo. Royal Business, owned by Ewart Johnston, picked up third money.

Hard Telling's backers collected $11.30 for $2 as the Runantell filly completed the journey in 1.26.

Police Boys' Club Raises $300 To Send Youngsters to Camp

Three hundred dollars has been contributed by local citizens in the campaign to raise funds to send approximately sixty members of the Cumberland Police Boys' Club to the Central Y. M. C. A. camp, August 19 to 26, Mrs. Nat Guggenheimer, club treasurer, announced yesterday.

The sum raised to date is $200 short of the $500 goal and those wishing to contribute to this most worthy cause are requested to mail or leave their donations with Mrs. Guggenheimer at the L. Bernstein Furniture Company, 9 North Centre street.

Directors of the Cumberland Police Boys' Club will meet Monday, August 3, at 8 p. m., in the Central Y. M. C. A.

Democratic Candidate For Governor Will Spend a Week Here

Thomas E. Cook, of Frederick, candidate for governor on the Democratic ticket, is a visitor in Cumberland in the interests of his candidacy. He plans to remain here for a week.

Cook reports reassuring progress in his campaign, which he says will be carried by him personally to every point in the state. He will center his efforts on a house to house canvass of voters.

The Frederick candidate says he is spending no money in the campaign.

"If one vote were needed to make Tom Cook governor of Maryland and that vote cost one penny," he said yesterday, "I would not pay the penny for the vote," because I want to serve the people honestly and honorably, and refuse to be a tool for any politician."

Further Expansion

modate sixty additional beds. This will bring the bed capacity of the hospital to 225. Two unfurnished floors under the original contract were to be finished at a later date as the need for additional space arose.

The budget set up for the construction amounted to $335,000. Of this amount, $150,000 was furnished by the city and a like amount by the county. The balance, $35,000, was hospital funds. This building program has proceeded as planned, and according to Weiss is ninety per cent completed.

As originally planned, 225 beds at the local hospital should have been ample to take care of the civilian needs of the city and county for several years. However, problems now facing the community, over which the hospital or the city has no control, make finishing the two unfinished floors necessary and vital to the general welfare.

Shows Reasons for Need

In a letter to the mayor and council Weiss submitted the following incidents as reasons why the hospital must undergo further expansion.

1. Ordnance and munitions plants being built in the city and near Pinto will employ 5,000 people. It is necessary to be prepared with hospital facilities for the proper care of these workers in the event of any incident which might occur in the manufacture of war material. The Ordnance department of the government has surveyed local hospital facilities and has been assured that ample hospital space will be provided here for these workers. Finishing of two additional floors will make 100 additional available when needed.

2. The hospital is headquarters for the Medical Advisory Board of the Selective Service organization for Allegany and Garrett counties. Under this program it is necessary to provide hospital space for numbers of selective service men at all times.

3. The nursing situation throughout the country is acute and serious in that there are shortages everywhere of trained nurses. To meet this shortage hospitals have been requested to conduct extra nursing classes to overcome and alleviate this condition. Memorial hospital has taken on one extra class of eighteen girls and has augmented other classes. The present Nurses' Home is not adequate to house these extra girls and at this time these girls are staying in private homes. Part of this new construction may be used to house extra nurses.

4. Medical civilian defense needs must be met and at the present time there is no place in the county where any large number of casualties can be hospitalized.

5. There is also the possibility of the necessity of evacuating casualties from the sea coasts areas to the more inland cities.

In commenting on all these possibilities and immediate needs which might arise, Weiss said it is the opinion of the board of governors that this constitutes an emergency situation which must be met as quickly as possible.

Council In Accord

Mayor Thomas F. Conlon and members of the council discussed the situation thoroughly and seriously. They agreed that in view of all these conditions which Weiss brought to their attention, and since there is an ever increasing shortage of material, action should be taken immediately to complete the hospital entirely and expand the facilities to accommodate as many as possible.

It was then, after this unanimous agreement that the city solicitor was authorized to proceed with necessary action to use emergency power of the mayor and council to get court permission to raise the necessary money by a special bond issue.

NOT A "BLACKWOOD"

Even when you are using the Blackwood 4-No Trumps convention, you will encounter plenty of situations in which the bid of 4-No Trumps is not the slam invitation, asking for number of aces in reply. Usually these occasions come after one or the other partner has made a genuine No Trump bid at a lower level, and is merely trying to sign the hand off at 4-No Trumps. When such is the situation, if you wish to invite slam, you have to do it by some other method, such as a voluntary suit bid beyond game, or a natural call of perhaps 5-No Trumps.

This was a sad story. After South bid 4-Clubs over his partner's 3-No Trumps, he interpreted North's 4-Spades as merely an effort to beg him to sign off at 4-No Trumps. So, when he bid 4-No Trumps, he had no idea North would consider it a Blackwood ace-asking call. North did, however, and showed two aces with his 5-Hearts response.

Now panicky, and believing that the 4-Spades might possibly be on a real suit, which it was, South showed a doubtful spade fit with his 5-Spades, which he thought North would surely pass. North considered all this very encouraging, so went to 6-Spades. West, perhaps none too ethically, took advantage of the worried expressions on his opponents' faces when he doubled.

Two heart tops, a heart ruff and a club back to the K gave the defense the first four tricks, setting it three, whereas stopping at 4-No Trumps would have made a game without any difficulty.

After East leads the diamond A against North's 4-Hearts on this deal, how should he decide what to lead to the second trick?

Gone But Not Forgotten

Come to me in my sadness
Drop your arms around me tight
And ask God to comfort
Your heart-broken mother tonight.
Flowers will bloom in the summer
In the autumn it will rain,
But the face of my dear Wade,
I would love to see again.
Dear son, when the violets open
And the flowers in beauty wave,
I will gather up some bunches
And lay them gently on your grave.
Oh, so often do I wander,
To the place where you are laid
And think if God had only left you
Longer on earth with me to stay.

Selective Buying Bolsters Stock Market, but Trading Is Light

Incentives Lacking and Many Remain on the Sidelines

By BERNARD S. O'HARA

NEW YORK, July 27 (AP)—Selective buying in rails, steels, motors and specialties again provided the main recovery fuel in today's stock market but demand even in these groups was far from urgent.

The list, ragged at the start, improved after mid-day and, at the best, gains ranged from fractions to a point or more. Plus marks were reduced or cancelled in many cases at the close although final trends were fairly steady.

Transfers for the full stretch amounted to 259,530 shares compared with 261,840 in the previous full session.

Incentives Lacking

Few purchasing incentives were found in the war news, the tax outlook and generally confusing inflation sentiment.

Santa Fe established its best quotation since 1938. Southern Pacific and Atlantic Coast Line went into new high ground for 1942. The former ended with a net loss of ¼. Southern Railway, Chesapeake & Ohio and Illinois Central retained minor advances.

Elsewhere stocks emerging with gains included United States Steel, Youngstown Sheet, Chrysler, Standard Oil (NJ), Kennecott, Goodrich, Douglas Aireraft, United States Gypsum and Consolidated Edison. Gamewell common was up 2¼ in response to a big increase in the fiscal year's net.

On the offside were General Motors, American Telephone, Westinghouse, General Electric, Sears Roebuck, Anaconda, Union Carbide and United States Rubber.

Curb Irregular

Ahead in an uneven curb were Electric Bond & Share, American Cyanamid, American Gas and N. J. Zinc. Small declines were recorded for American Light, Brewster Aero, Mesabi Iron and Phoenix. Securities. Turnover here aggregated 44,420 shares versus 42,280 last Friday.

A flurry of buying in issues of the St. Louis-San Francisco railway stood out in a steady and fairly active bond market.

The day's trading total was $5,133,000 par value. Friday's volume was $5,739,200.

United States governments showed little change.

DICK TRACY—The Go Signal

City May Buy New Aerial Truck For Fire Fighting

Commissioner James Orr Making Plans for Augmenting Equipment

In view of the national defense situation and the possibility that Cumberland, along with other American cities might be subjected to air raids or a wave of sabotage, Police and Fire Commissioner James Orr is considering a plan to purchase a new aerial truck to be added to the city's fire fighting equipment.

With expansion of local industry and steady growth of the city in property value and population, Commissioner Orr said the need for a hook and ladder truck or some type of aerial ladder or water tower has become more pressing. In fact, the need has been felt for the past ten years or more, and national fire underwriters have repeatedly called official attention to the fact that the city lacks this type of desirable fire fighting apparatus.

Present Truck Is Old

The old hook and ladder truck, now at Central fire station is little more than a relic of the horse-drawn vehicle days. Firemen took the city's old equipment and built the present hook and ladder truck. It was put into service in 1905. On occasions it has been used, but is regarded by firemen as dangerous to work with, and obsolete in many respects. In the first place, its ladders are too short to reach the upper floors of many local buildings, and practically the whole piece of equipment is built of wood. The proposed new truck would be all steel, including an eighty-five foot aerial ladder with water line to the top.

A modern piece of fire-fighting apparatus, for combating fires in large buildings can be purchased for about $18,000 to $20,000 and this cost can be spread over a ten-year period, Commissioner Orr explains. This would mean a maximum of $2,000 a year at the most, and the city would then have equipment that is recognized as desirable and adequate for local emergencies.

Commissioner Orr has already applied to the War Production Board for a priority rating which will amount to the government's permission to purchase such a piece of equipment. The priority rating will not be granted unless officials in Washington, after investigation, believe it is needed here. If the priority is granted, then the matter can be taken before council for its decision, the commissioner said.

Insufficient Equipment

Cumberland, for some time has been rated by fire insurance companies as having insufficient equipment for a city of this size. There are three neighboring fire stations with one piece of equipment each, in addition to Central station, where there are two engines.

In the event of a serious emergency, officials and many citizens believe the city's fire companies might be handicapped by lack of proper fire-fighting equipment.

As one local firemen expressed it, "Eighteen thousand dollars seems like a lot of money to pay for a hook and ladder or aerial truck, but just one fire in a crowded school building, hospital or other of our taller buildings would make this cost seem small, especially if life was lost for the sake of a ladder long enough."

Aircraft Spotters Hear Organization Of AWS Explained

Non-commissioned Army Officers Speak at City Hall Meeting

Organization of the Aircraft Warning Service and operation of an information center were explained to twenty-eight interested citizens and aircraft spotters at a meeting held last night in city hall auditorium. A film, "What about Air Raids," was shown.

Sgt. Harry J. Murphy and Corp. Robert Bartron, of the United States Army Air Force, Philadelphia, conducted the meeting in connection with their inspection of aircraft spotter posts in this county. A similar meeting will be held again tonight in city hall.

Bartron, speaking of the importance of the Aircraft Warning Service, said it is "up to the spotters" to prevent the bombing of the United States by a "clever" enemy.

Cumberland, a part of the Philadelphia region, is only a short distance from the East coast by airplane, Bartron said.

In explaining the operation of an information center, Murphy related how all calls from a spotter station are sent to a filter center. From the filter center, he said, they are relayed to information centers where the route of each airplane is plotted on an information board.

Claude L. Deal, district subdirector of the Aircraft Warning Service, introduced the non-commissioned army officers.

Clauson Rites Are Held

Funeral services for George Washington Clauson, Ellerslie, were held yesterday afternoon at his late home with the Rev. William A. Eisenberger and the Rev. Thomas W. Kemp officiating. Interment was in Rose Hill cemetery.

Pallbearers were Wilbur A., George E. and Paul A. Buchanan, Earl Cook, Bruce Long and William Clauson.

Chatter is interested in knowing if the letters appearing in this column for those in service are meeting with the approval of parents and relatives of those in the armed forces. Also it would help to know how many are clipping the letters each week and mailing them to someone in the service. A post card telling Chatter what you think of the feature and any suggestions you have to make it more interstng would be appreciated.

3 Hitch-Hikers Rob Uniontown Man on Route 40

Robbery Occurs near Shipway's Inn, Charles Tesky Tells Police

An obliging motorist who picked up three hitch-hikers, two youths and a girl, about 6 o'clock last evening on Route 40 near Shipway's Inn twenty miles from here, was held up at gun point and robbed of his money and identification cards.

Charles Tesky, of Uniontown, Pa. told state police that the trio flagged him down and after he had picked them up and driven them a short distance one of the youths stuck a pistol in his ribs. Besides taking his pocketbook containing his money and cards the robbers threw the ignition key to his car into the dense woods along the road.

After searching for about forty-five minutes Tesky found the key and was able to drive to Shipway's Inn and report the robbery to the LaVale barracks of the Maryland State Police. A three-state radio alarm was sent out and Lieut. Carl Dillinger and Sgt. John H. Doud sped to the scene.

Although he was not sure, Tesky told Lieut Carl Dillinger, that he passed a parked car shortly before picking up the trio and he believes they escaped in this car with a confederate. The last he saw of them they were headed toward Cumberland.

The girl was a brunette about twenty years old and wore a yellow blouse and a dark skirt, Tesky said. The two youths were dressed in blue polo shirts and blue slacks, he added. Both were between eighteen and twenty years of age, Tesky surmised. The victimized motorist was on his way from Uniontown to Baltimore, he told police.

All Sugar Stamps Are Same Value

Two Pounds Fixed as Limit, Barnard Warns Grocers and the Public

Grocers and the public were warned yesterday by Robert E. Barnard, chairman of the local War Price and Rationing Board, that there should be no variation in the number of pounds of sugar issued on Ration Stamp No. 7.

Barnard said that reports have reached his office that varying amounts were being issued; sometimes one pound, sometimes two and even as high as four pounds. In some instances, he said, there was a mistaken belief that the two pounds of sugar permitted by the use of Ration Stamp No. 7 is an additional two pounds above the regular value for which stamps 5 and 6 may each be used.

Stamps Nos. 5, 6 and 7 have a purchasing weight value of two pounds each, and must be used accordingly, Barnard said. Stamp No. 5 was good only through July 25; and Stamp No. 6 is good from July 26 to August 22. Stamp No. 7 became effective on July 10 and is valid until August 22. It represents an extra ration, and this does not in any way decrease the value or affect the ration periods already designated for stamps with lower numbers. It is not necessary for consumers to use Stamp No. 6 before they are permitted to use Stamp No. 7.

Barnard pointed out that the designation of this extra sugar ration did not establish a precedent, because there was no assurance that the shipping situation would continue as favorable as it has been in recent weeks.

Attorney Opposes Private Sale of Milling Company

Whiting Asks Court To Order Trustees To Advertise Property

In an exception to ratification of the private sale by trustees of the R. D. Johnson Milling Company property on Wineow street for $6,000, the Allegany county circuit court is asked to refuse ratification and to pass an order directing trustees to advertise and sell the milling property at public sale. The exception was filed by F. Brooke Whiting, attorney, yesterday.

A report of the private sale has been made by Albert A. Doub and J. Philip Roman, trustees and orders nisi are now being published, according to Whiting's petition.

Whiting explains that he owns seven shares of preferred stock in the milling company and that one of his clients, Abraham Feldstein, has signified his willingness to pay $7,000 for the property by depositing with the clerk of court a cashier's check for $1,000.

Several weeks ago, J. Philip Roman and Albert A. Doub, Jr., appeared before Allegany county commissioners regarding this property. At that time the attorneys said they had a buyer for the property at $6,000, and sought such relief from interest on taxes or other adjustments as the commissioners. The attorneys expressed the view then that the property would bring little more than $6,000 at public sale, and probably not enough more to pay the costs of advertising and selling.

The R. D. Johnson Milling company property here is one of the oldest enterprises in the city. It was founded by the late Col. Richard Dorsey Johnson and for years was a flour mill and one of the most important enterprises in the city. The business was established almost a century ago, but has been more or less inactive during the past decade.

ODT Appoints Six Gas Consultants

Local Men Will Pass on I. C. C. Gasoline Application Requirements

Interstate Commerce Commission truck operators in Allegany county must register their gas requirements with the Office of Defense Transportation, the local War Price and Rationing Board was advised yesterday by the state headquarters of the Office of Price Administration.

The OPA notified the local office that there are thirty-five I.C.C. truck operators in Allegany county and only one has registered with the ODT office, Baltimore.

Six consultants have been appointed here for O.D.T. and will pass on I.C.C. gas application requirements. They are E. J. Steinla, 132 South Mechanic street; F. R. Garland, 603 Piedmont avenue; J. H. Simmons, McMullen highway; Paul S. Sullivan, 1504 Dilley street; James E. Perrin, Pershing street, and F. Brooke Whiting, Washington street.

The rationing board will mail a list of I.C.C. operators to the OPA, Baltimore, after they have been certified by the O.D.T. consultant.

War Is Reflected In Many Problems Of City Council

National Crisis Causes Additional Burdens for Local Officials

The war is steadily affecting the lives of more and more people, and is reaching into the operation of municipal as well as county and state governments in many ways. This fact was brought out abruptly yesterday at the regular meeting of the mayor and council when a number of situations, all of which touched on the war effort, were discussed.

In addition to the immediate needs for expansion of local hospital facilities, council discussed, at the suggestion of City Solicitor Charles Z. Heskett, the advisability of lowering the age limits for applicants for appointment to the Police and Fire departments.

Heskett expressed the view that it would be far better business on the part of the city to employ men as young as eighteen to thirty-seven instead of older men, because the older men will reach retirement age sooner and become a burden on the city pension plan.

At the same time, Heskett pointed out, younger men make a better appearance and are also better able physically to cope with situations which might arise during war time. He expressed the view that the age limit should be lowered and physical standards be kept high.

Mayor Thomas F. Conlon said he believes there are many young married men who have been deferred from draft because of dependents, who might be interested if they are notified or given an opportunity.

Many Recent Changes

This situation was mentioned by the city solicitor, he said, because he noticed that there seemed to be numerous recent changes in both the Police and Fire departments, because men are returning to work in defense industries. More resignations of police and firemen trained along mechanical and other lines are indicated he said.

Council agreed that the matter should be referred to the police and fire chiefs and police and fire commissioner, who could talk to the civil service commission and offer the suggestion.

Council was urged by Luther Harr, of the Bituminous Coal Consumers Counsel of Washington, D. C., to buy coal now and avoid a possible shortage later, which seems likely because of transportation problems.

Commissioner Orr was given authority to seek a priority rating for the purchase of a new aerial truck for the city's fire department.

To Widen Intersection

Permission was given the Kelly Springfield Tire Company to grade lots it owns at the intersection of Patterson avenue and Springfield boulevard to widen the intersection at that point to provide easier access for workers and traffic.

A letter from Stanley J. Hillock, WPA supervisor, informed the Council the rail removal project on Virginia avenue, between Oldtown road and Laing avenue, will be completed about August 1 and asked where work should be started next. Virginia avenue below the subway and Thomas street were suggested but no decision reached.

Approve 15-Day Vacation

Vacation for health workers was fixed at fifteen working days to conform with vacations provided state health workers.

G. Bernard Miltenberger was named manager of the Mexico Farms airport.

The application of the Allegany county commissioners for permission to install a 1000-gallon gasoline tank on Franklin street was referred to the engineer and fire chief with power to act.

The Council declined to proclaim Wednesday a half holiday for the B. and O. Veterans picnic, Mayor Thomas F. Conlon declaring now is not the time to be working half days.

The application of Thomas A. Carscaden for the post of plumbing inspector was referred to the Department of Health.

Building Permits Show Slump Here

Only Eight Issued in Month; 11 Homes Built Here in Seven Months

Eight building permits—three for new construction and five for additions and improvements—were issued during the fiscal month ending July 25, by the city engineer's office.

While the number of permits issued equalled the low of eight for January, the total cost of improvements amounting to $4,050 represented the lowest figure of the year.

Permits for July included one residence, $1,500; one garage, $150; one car repair shop, $1,200, and five additions and improvements, $1,200.

Records at city hall indicated that only eleven permits for new residences have been issued for the seven months' period, January to July, inclusive, compared to seventy-five permits issued for the same period in 1941. This difference in sixty-four homes is a coincidence in view of the fact that the National Housing Agency recently granted permission for the construction of sixty-five homes here. Permits for the construction of 124 dwellings were issued here during the calendar year of 1941. The home building program was curbed by the government in April due to much of the material used in the construction of dwellings being essential in the war effort.

Walter L. Weires yesterday obtained a permit for the construction of a one room frame addition to an apartment over a garage at 333 Baltimore avenue. Cost is estimated at $200.

Republican Group To Fill Vacancies On GOP Ticket

Candidates for Attorney General and Comptroller To Be Chosen

BALTIMORE, July 27 (AP)—W. David Tilghman, Jr., chairman of the Republican State Central Committee, said today the committee would meet in about two weeks to fill the two statewide vacancies on the GOP ticket.

Candidates for attorney general and comptroller would be chosen, he said, as running mates for Theodore R. McKeldin, the Republican organization candidate for governor.

There are two candidates for the GOP gubernatorial nomination, McKeldin and W. Pinkney West, Jr., There are none for the offices of attorney general and comptroller. The candidates nominated by the state central committee before Aug. 22 deadline would be assured the party nomination and would oppose the Democratic incumbents, Attorney General William C. Walsh and Comptroller J. Millard Tawes, in the general election.

Tilghman said the nominations would be offered to Fred Wadell of Hurlock and William A. Gunter of Cumbreland. The party's state canvass committee which drafted a slate of candidates chose McKeldin to run for governor, Wadell for comptroller and Gunter for the attorney generalship.

The party chairman said also neither Wadell nor Gunter had turned down the nomination flatly. The party's constitution provides for ten days' notice of the nominating meeting for committeemen, Tilghman added.

Asked if there was any chance of a Republican endorsement of either Walsh or Tawes, Tilghman said, "There is no chance of such endorsement."

Erwin Huber, former president of the Advertising Club of Baltimore, endorsed today West's candidacy for the gubernatorial nomination at the primaries Sept. 8.

"The Republican party," Huber said, "is still a vital factor in American life. The Republican voters of Maryland are not in a mood to follow a leadership predestined to failure."

Board Sets Age Limit for Police Applicants at 35

Minimum Age Will Remain at 21; Seven Take Out Papers for Test

Applicants for positions on the Cumberland Police Department must be between twenty-one and thirty-five years old, the Board of Civil Service Commissioners of the City of Cumberland ruled last evening at a meeting in city hall.

The minimum weight of applicants will remain at 140 pounds and the minimum height is five feet, eight inches. All applicants must be a resident of Cumberland three or more years.

Age, height and weight specifications are in connection with the civil service examination for police Thursday, August 13, at 7 p. m., in Fort Hill high school.

At a meeting on July 22 the board announced that applicants must be between twenty-one and forty-three years of age instead of the former maximum age of forty.

Charles Z. Heskett, city attorney, called attention to the action of the board at yesterday's council session and characterized it as "a step in the wrong direction and that the city needs younger and stronger men, not older and weaker ones." Heskett also pointed out that if older men are added to the department the already unworkable police pension plan will become more muddled.

Asked to Make Change

C. Philip Jolley, chairman of the civil service board, said that the board raised the age limit on July 22 at the suggestion of the police department and in view of the emergency, and that the board did not take the initiative in the matter.

"The board always has taken into consideration the pension system and it has been our aim to keep the age down," Jesse W. Korn, a member of the board, remarked.

The 21 to 35 age limit was used last year, then it was raised to forty, Korns said. At one time, he recalled, age limit was thirty-three years.

Seven applications were taken out yesterday at city hall. Those who received them were:

Two Men Now On List

The examination is being held in view of the fact that a number of the police department have resigned recently to accept other work and the police eligible list has been reduced to two men.

All applications must be in the hands of the city clerk not later than 12 o'clock noon on Saturday, August 8.

W. J. Hadra, Sr., Dies Suddenly In Pearisburg

Heart Attack Is Fatal to Former Resident of This City

William J. Hadra, Sr., 52, a native of Cumberland, died yesterday morning at 11:30 o'clock in St. Elizabeth's hospital, Pearsburg, Va. where he was taken after he suffered a heart attack several hours before while working in the Celanese plant at Narrows, Va.

Hadra had been employed at the Celanese plant there as an assistant engineer in the textile department since 1939. He worked in Cumberland at the local Celanese plant for seven years as a machinist foreman in the textile department. He learned his trade at the Western Maryland railroad shops here.

While he resided in Cumberland he was high priest of Salem Chapter No. 18 and past senior warden of Ohr Lodge, No. 181, A. F. and A. M. He was a member of Centre Street Methodist church and active in church organizations here before going to Narrows.

Hadra was also prominent in church work at Narrows, Va., and was teacher of the Adult Male Bible Class and a steward in the Narrows First Methodist church. He was a member of the Narrows Kiwanis Club.

Besides his widow, the former Miss Ida Mae Fair, of Mt. Savage; he is survived by the following children; William J. Jr., of Baltimore; Miss Eleen and Elman, Narrows, Va., and one sister, Mrs. C. A. Baumer, this city. Funeral arrangements are incomplete pending the arrival of his son from Baltimore.

Further Expansion of Memorial Hospital Needed As War Measure

Mayor and City Council Seek Court Action To Sell Bonds

Because of the war and Cumberland's steadily increasing importance as a war industry center, plans were considered yesterday by the mayor and city council to proceed immediately with further expansion of facilities at Memorial hospital, and instructed Charles Z. Heskett, city solicitor, to seek permission of the Allegany County Circuit Court to issue $37,500 in bonds as an emergency measure.

Emergency Situation

Harvey H. Weiss, superintendent of the hospital, explained to the council that under the present building program at the hospital, the expansion plan calls for finishing two floors only of the new addition, but the war and other features of present conditions make it imperative that the other two floors also be finished now, to further enlarge facilities of the institution.

Emergency action at this time is necessary, Weiss said, because priority ratings in possession of the hospital expire September 1, and after that date it will not be possible to purchase plumbing fixtures and other equipment needed to complete the addition. At least $20,000 must be spent immediately for equipment, Weiss explains.

The total cost of finishing the two floors is estimated at $75,000. Half of this amount is expected to come from county commissioners and they will be asked to appropriate their half, Weiss stated.

The contract for the new building program at the hospital was let June 19, 1941. This contract called for construction and equipping a laundry, kitchen, boiler rooms, two finished floors and two unfinished floors. The one finished floor was to serve as dining rooms and rest rooms adjacent to the new kitchen and the second finished floor together with the old kitchen and dining rooms to be used to accom-

Police and Firemen Are Essential To Public Safety, Commission Says

Local Draft Boards Have Not Been Asked To Grant Deferments

Although the War Manpower Commission and the Selective Service System recently recognized policemen and firemen as essential to public safety, James Orr, commissioner of police and fire, said yesterday he has not asked local draft boards for deferments for members of either police or fire departments here.

The declaration of the War Manpower Commission and the Selective Service System authorizes draft boards to defer police and fire officers who are certified by their superior officers as necessary to the efficient functioning of their departments.

Orr said he agreed that policemen and firemen should be classified as essential in safeguarding the public but reiterated he had not asked for deferments.

To date, no members of either the police or fire departments have been called for military service by the local draft boards, although one member of the Police department received a leave of absence to volunteer in the United States Marine Corps. Three other officers resigned to take positions in defense industries and another's resignation takes effect Thursday. He will accept employment with the Baltimore and Ohio railroad. No firemen have been lost to military service or defense industries.

Chairmen of the three local draft boards said last night that under Selective Service law no group deferments can be given. Each particular case must be considered separately as it arises, they explained.

Action in declaring policemen and firemen as essential to public safety followed several conference between officers of the Initernational Association of Chiefs of Police and Chairman Paul V. McNutt, of the War Manpower Commission, Major General Lewis B. Hershey, director, and Col. George Baker, chief of manpower division, selective service system.

Boy Suffers Severe Hand Injury while Chopping Wood

While chopping wood yesterday at his home in Oldtown, Jefferson Davis, 8, suffered a severely lacerated left hand. Two of the boy's fingers were almost severed. After treatment in the dispensary he was admitted.
